TENANTS' LEAGUE IS PRAISED

Business and Civic Leaders Endorse American's Move to Halt Rent Profiteering

The Boston American's plan of relieving the rent situation by the formation of the Boston American Tenants' League to get behind the bill of Representative Martin Hays of Ward 25, and put an immediate stop to rent profiteering, announced yesterday, has met with instantaneous approval on every side.

John J. Martin, vice-president of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, was one of the first to endorse the aims of the Boston American Tenants' League, indicating that all reputable real estate men throughout the State will favor the organization and its aims.

Commendations of the new organization's aims furiy poured into the office of the Boston American as soon as its plans became known, and signed enrolment blanks began to filter in from many directions, showing the intense interest in the rent question, and expressing the heartiest sympathy with the American's efforts

HEARING ON HEARST INJUNCTION DELAYED

Washington, March 20.—Hearing on the motion of the Shipping Board to dismiss the injunction secured by William Randolph Hearst against the sale of the former German passenger fleet, was postponed by Justice Thomas J. Bailey until Monday.

DENIES CAPTURE OF 'RED' REED

Wife Ridicules Story That Man in Finland Coal Bunker Was Author

Washington, March 20.—Commenting on press dispatches that a man taken from a coal bunker and arrested at Abo, Finland, was John Reed, well known writer, indicted in Chicago for his activities with the Communist Labor party, Louise Bryant, Reed's wife, issued the following statement:

"I don't believe it. I can't tell you anything about Mr. Reed's whereabouts because I really do not know. "But I do know this; ever since March, 1917, he has been interested in writing a history of the Russian revolution. That has been his deepest interest — to write a complete and comprehensive history — and it seems to me highly incredible that he should be found in a coal bunker somewhere on the edge of Finland with his pockets full of diamonds.

"It is as ridiculous as a story given out two months ago that he was working in a tool factory in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Jack is a journalist —not a mechanic or jewelry merchant."

John D., 3d., Able to Hold $160,000,000

Washington, March 20.—Little John D. Rockefeller III., accompanied by his father, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has made an exhaustive examination of the United States Treasury.

With Frank J. F. Thiel, deputy assistant treasurer, as a guide, the Rockefellers were piloted through the building. Little John D. was taken to the currency and gold certificate vaults where are stored packages, each weighing twelve pounds, containing $10,400 bills to the number of $40,000,000.

"You're now holding $40,000,000."

"Huh, that isn't much! I can hold another."

Whereupon two packages, totalling $80,000,000, were placed in his arms.

"I can hold another one," the boy said, and he got a third.

Bracing himself he made one more request.

"I can hold one more."

The fourth twelve-pound package was added and he staggered under the weight of forty-eight pounds, which represented $160,000,000.

To Renew Battle for Treaty in Senate

By International News Service.

Washington, March 20.—The treaty of Versailles rests with President Wilson today. The entire attention of the nation was focussed on the White House following the Senate's refusal for the second time to ratify the treaty.

The weight of opinion was that the chief executive would pigeonhole the document and submit it to the "solemn referendum" which he advocated in his Jackson Day message—the next election.

It is highly probable that the President will issue a statement to the nation or send a message to the Senate outlining his attitude upon the future of the treaty.

If the President has not acted by Monday, when the Senate reconvenes, it is expected that efforts will be made in that body to end the technical state of war in which the United States still finds itself. Senator Knox's resolution declaring the war with Germany at an end was pending in the Senate last night when adjournment was taken. On Monday efforts will be

DYNAMITE ICE JAMS IN RIVERS

Heavy Floes in Flooded Districts Threaten to Sweep Away Weakened Bridges

The worst floods this State has experienced in years were threatened today when a storm which had deposited nearly six inches of snow during the night turned to rain, swelling the rising streams and rivers.

From the valleys of the Merrimack, Taunton and Charles rivers reports were received of tottering bridges, shaky dams and inundated highways, causing fears of great property damage and possible loss of life.

In several places the water was said to have reached the depth attained in the floods of 1902, and workmen were busy strengthening dams and bridges and dynamiting ice jams.

The Concord River was said to be higher than it has been in thirty years, the Charles was reported to be rising one inch an hour, and similar conditions were recorded on the Merrimac, Taunton and other streams.

Hundreds of cellars were flooded, mills were forced to keep pumps going continually, and from all sections stories were heard of automobiles stalled on water swept highways.

Train and trolley service was somewhat impaired by the wet, clinging snow, and commuters were subjected to much annoyance and inconvenience.

The weather bureau predicts rain

Kapp Called Insane by His Family

By International News Service.

Paris, March 20.—Wolfgang Kapp, who set up a revolutionary government at Berlin one week ago today, was said by members of his family in 1916 to be insane, according to a story printed by the Cris de Paris. The newspaper says it learned that Kapp submitted a report to the Kaiser in 1916, declaring that Germany would lose the war if Von Bethmann-Hollweg continued in office as Chancellor. The Chancellor learned of it and reported to the Kaiser that members of Kapp's family claimed he was insane. The Kaiser accepted Von Bethmann-Hollweg's statement, dismissed the Kapp report and warned the Chancellor to be on his guard against assassination by Kapp.

EBERT WON'T LET NOSKE QUIT

President Refuses to Accept Resignation of Minister of Defence

Stuttgart, March 20.—President Ebert has refused to allow Gustav Noske, his minister of defence, to resign.

Berlin, March 20.—Gustav Noske, Ebert's minister of defence, and Dr. K. W. Wl Heine, Prussian minister of the interior, have resigned, it was reported here.

It is rumored that twenty officers were lynched at Schoenberg, a suburb of Berlin; also that an officer and several privates have been thrown into the River Spree by rioters.

Serious events are looked for.

Resignation of both Noske and Heine was included in the demands of the workers as conditions upon which they would call off the general strike.

GERMAN WORKERS DEMAND POWER

Coblenz, March 20.—An army of 40,000 armed and well-trained Communists has been massed in the Ruhr district, ready to move towards Berlin at a favorable opportunity, according to information reaching officers of the American Army of Occupation today. Many of the Communists are ex-soldiers. It was said that they were ready to act in the Ruhr district or to move towards Berlin if a Bolshevist coup is deemed feasible at this time.

By International News Service.

Berlin, March 20.—Leaders of the workers demand a controlling voice in all legislation, meaning a dictatorship by the proletariat, as one of the eleven conditions for calling off the general strike. The strike still is in effect.

It is reported that the Spartacists (Bolshevik sympathisers) have five tanks ready for operation against the government buildings which now are occupied by troops supporting the Ebert constitutional government.

The Spartacists are said to have secured thousands of rifles, many machine guns and great quantities of ammunition from the Spandau arsenal.

EXPECT TO END STATE OF WAR

Senate's Rejection Makes Measure an Assured Factor in Presidential Fight

made to bring it up and secure action upon it.

WANT TO TRY ONCE MORE.

Democrats, who believe the treaty should be ratified with the majority reservations, will not abate their efforts to dispose of the pact in that manner. A new group of Democratic leaders, probably under the leadership of William Jennings Bryan, are expected immediately to begin their efforts to bring about sufficient pressure to get the treaty before the Senate again and dispose of it before the election.

On Monday some of these Democrats are expected to ask unanimous consent to the Senate vote on reconsideration of its action of last night, when the treaty was defeated by a vote of 35 to 49 and returned to the President by a vote of 47 to 37.

Political leaders today were defending and condemning the course taken by the Senate. Twenty-eight Republicans and twenty-one Democrats voted for ratification. Twelve Republicans and twenty-three Democrats voted against ratification.

OFF ON CAMPAIGN TRIPS.

Republican campaign activities checked up today as the final action on the treaty by the Senate settled. Senator Harding left last night for a campaign trip and Senator Johnson is to return to Michigan. Other Senators with presidential aspirations were preparing to take the stump.

Immediately following the vote by which the treaty was rejected, the Senate adopted a resolution offered by Senator Lodge directing the Secretary to return the treaty to the President and reading him that ratification could not be accomplished. The vote on the adoption of this resolution was 47 to 37.

Next Monday the Senate will immediately turn its attention to the proposition of declaring peace with Germany by a resolution which both Houses of Congress have asked to pass. Senator Knox began the discussion of his resolution on the subject shortly after the vote on which the treaty had been recorded, but at the suggestion of Senator Lodge it consented to wait until Monday for formal action on it.

That such a resolution will pass is conceded by the ablest leaders of the Senate, in view of the second failure of the attempt to obtain peace ratification of the treaty.

IT DESERTED PRESIDENT.

Only twenty-one voted with the President, departing into the uncertain and uncharted paths wherein Bryan and Hitchcock and other reservative leaders beckoned them to ratify and accept the Lodge reservations.

When the curtain was rung down on the treaty, which in the opinion of Senators Lodge, Borah, Reed, Simmons, Hitchcock and other leaders in the fight will never appear on the Senate table again, the closest calculations of the treaty opponents as well as those of the administration Democrats were completely verified.

After the vote had been made and the resolution directing the return of the treaty to the President had been adopted, Senator Robinson of Arkansas led a forlorn chance for vote reconsideration.

He made a motion to reconsider the vote by which the treaty was rejected. Promptly Senator Watson, one of Senator Lodge's principal allies, got to his feet to move to lay this motion on the table.

Then followed the remarkable and unexpected secession of the seven "mild reservation" Republicans, led by Senator Harreld, who refused to support Senator Watson's motion. Their votes turned the balance, as Senator Watson's motion was defeated, 34 to 42. The Republicans, who then deserted Senator Lodge in the midst of the fight were Lenroot, Hale, Kellogg, McNary, Keyes, Edge and Colt.

CREATES CONSTERNATION.

The announcement of the vote on Senator Watson's motion caused momentary consternation among the ranks of the Republicans, especially among the irreconcilables and the Borah-Johnson-Brandegee group, who had been congratulating themselves upon the signal victory they had won in consideration of the vote. It was feared, could give every Democrat an opportunity to switch to the side of ratification, and the treaty then would be ratified.

It was a tremulous moment in the fight, but Senator Brandegee came to the rescue. He made the point that Senator Robinson's motion was not in order because the Senate had previously voted to return the treaty to the President. The vote could not be reconsidered. Senator Brandegee argued, when the treaty was dead and the dead thing had been ordered taken away."

Senator Robinson came back with the argument that such a line of reasoning was absurd. The treaty might be dead, he asserted, but actually it was lying on the Secretary's desk. He declared that if the chair ruled otherwise, he would make a motion to ask the President to return to the Senate something which was ordered sent to him, but which the Senate already had.

MOTION TO ADJOURN.

Then came a motion to adjourn. This would have given the treaty supporters a chance to spread a little leaven among the Democrats and perhaps win enough of them over to vote for ratification when reconsideration was taken. This was exactly what treaty's foes did not want to have done. So at Senator Lodge's suggestion the motion was defeated on call, and the parliamentary row, Soldier ship being inclined to give the other any sort of chance.

Senator Lodge sought to pour oil on the waters by suggesting that, if he were able to obtain a reconsideration of the vote by unanimous consent, he would ask that another vote on the question of ratification be taken at once. It became painfully evident even to the friends of the treaty that Senator Lodge would not have made such an offer if he had not been absolutely certain that the votes against the treaty would hold the line hard. He had been advised by Senator Gerry, the Democratic whip, that even if there should be a reconsideration not a single Democratic vote would be changed.

Senators Hitchcock, Simmons, Robinson and others of the administration group thereupon declined to be beguiled by Senator Lodge's generous offer, and after a brief parley Senator Robinson withdrew his motion to reconsider, and there the matter ended.

"Thank God the Treaty Is Dead," Says Gore

Washington, March 20.—Comment by senators on the death of the treaty was varied. Here is what some of them had to say:

Senator Reed, Democrat, of Missouri—"The defeat of this treaty is the greatest thing that has happened in this country since the surrender of Cornwallis. Now I think we should follow the President's advice and take it to the people. The people will settle it."

Senator Thomas F. Gore, Democrat, of Oklahoma: "Thank God the treaty is dead; long live the Republic; at least rigor mortis is obvious."

Senator Robert La Follette, Republican, of Wisconsin: "I feel that the defeat of this document is the salvation of the Republic and its institutions. It will be a great relief to the people. It is indeed a great triumph. I hope it is final."

Senator Trammel, Democrat, of Florida: "I think it is a great misfortune that the Senate will not adopt the reservations, did not go through."

Senator King, Democrat, of Utah.—"I deeply regret that the fate of this treaty was made possible by the Democrats. I am certain that it is dead and the Democrats helped to kill it."

Senator Thomas Sterling, Republican, of South Dakota.—"It is dead now. It has been dying for two or three days and I don't think the President will resubmit it to the Senate."

Senator Borah, Republican, of Idaho.—"The treaty is quite dead and I am quite happy."

CURTIS BLAMES WILSON.

Senator Walsh, Democrat, of Massachusetts—"The treaty is dead, and the least said the better."

Senator Sherman, Republican, of Illinois—"I voted to help defeat the treaty, and I have no regrets. I would vote that way again if it came up, but I hope it won't. The defeat of the treaty is a fortunate escape of the American people from the feuds and endless warfare of the Old World."

Senator Curtis, Republican, of Kansas—"I think that the opponents of the defeat of the treaty can be laid at the door of the President. If he would have countenanced reasonable reservations I believe there would have been sufficient votes to put it through."

Senator New, Republican, of Indiana—"The attitude of the Senate has become more and more convinced of the unwisdom of this act. I believe that with any reservations that might have been adopted the treaty would be better of without it than with it."

Senator Selden Spencer, Republican, of Missouri—"The treaty is dead and the President killed it. He negotiated an un-American and impossible document, and when his mistakes had been corrected by the Senate and the interests of the United States protected, he refused to countenance the American document, and therefore it is ended. The country is the loser, and the people in their own time and in no uncertain way will punish."

LEUTZEN KILLED TREATY.

Senator Watson, Republican, of Indiana—"I have never had any hope that the treaty would be ratified since the President's letter to Senator Hitchcock, in which the President said the whole treaty centered in Article X. There was some chance before that for a compromise, but after the President's letter there was never an opportunity for any agreement, in my judgment.

"Only twenty-one Democrats voted for ratification. On a proposition to compromise before the President's letter, in which Senator Simmons was interested, there probably would have been a sufficient number of Democrats to ratify. But after the President's letter, it was certain that a sufficient number of Democrats would follow him to prevent ratification at all costs."

Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska—"I am glad the treaty has been defeated. It will now be made a campaign issue, and the Republicans will be glad to meet it."

Senator Simmons, Democrat, of North Carolina—"The treaty will now go to the President. I don't know what he will no with it. He may send it back to the Senate. If he does not send it back, that will be the end of it."

Americans Warned Not to Enter Germany

Washington, March 20.—All Americans, men and women, who are planning to visit Germany were warned of the consequences of entering that country, and told their venture would be at their own risk when they applied for passports, it was authoritatively announced here today.

Because the United States is technically at war with Germany, the State Department at no time has been able to issue a passport to Germany. In a number of instances, however, it issued persons passports to Holland, Belgium, Switzerland and other German borderland countries, and at the same time knew that the applicant's object was Germany.

In all of these cases, however, the applicants were warned as a matter of precaution of the lack of an American diplomatic and consular service in Germany, and the inability of the United States to furnish American citizens with adequate or immediate assistance if danger arose.

Now that danger has come to pass, the government, it was asserted, is almost powerless, unless it choose armed intervention, to safeguard its nationals in revolution-torn Germany. The only hope seen here today for the Americans in danger in Berlin and elsewhere in Germany rests in probable action by Major-General Henry T. Allen, commanding the American forces on the Rhine, in sending an armed train to the German capital to remove them to the American zone of occupation, and from there to send them into France.

Hitchcock and Lodge on Treaty's Death

Washington, March 20.—Following are statements obtained on the rejection of the treaty from Senator Lodge, majority leader, and Senator Hitchcock, minority leader:

Senator Lodge: "The treaty is gone. It has been rejected by the Senate and sent back to the President. If the President chooses to return it to the Senate, it will have to go through the same processes as before. If it goes to the foreign relations committee he will have a mighty hard time getting it out. If the President declines to make a campaign issue of it the Republicans are perfectly willing to meet it."

Senator Hitchcock: "I am glad the ratification did not early on the Lodge reservations, but the result was about what I expected. It will now be up to the President and he will have to take the initiative."

WILSON ASKED ABOUT TROOPS

House Seeks Light on Status of U. S. Forces Now in Germany

Washington, March 20.—President Wilson is asked in a resolution introduced in the House by Representative Kahn, Republican, of California, to inform the House of the exact status of the American military forces in Germany. The text of the resolution follows:

"Resolved by the House of Representatives that the President be and he is hereby requested, if not incompatible with the public interest, to inform the House of the exact status of the American military forces now stationed in Germany, the scope to which the operations are confined under the terms of the armistice between the allied nations, the government of the United States and Germany; the extent of the authority exercised over them by Field Marshal Ferdinand Foch, commander-in-chief of the allied forces in the occupied Rhine provinces, and how far their activities may be directed without express orders from the President of the United States."

The object of Mr. Kahn's resolution is to ascertain the extent to which the American troops could be made use of in the event of a decision to invade Germany to put down revolution.

No Americans Killed During Germany's Upset

Washington, March 20.—No American citizens or foreigners were injured, as far as it is known, in the recent revolution in Germany, according to dispatches reaching the State Department from Berlin.

The dispatches state that the National Assembly will meet in Berlin on Monday and the question of a general amnesty to participants in the counter revolution will be considered. The personnel of the Ebert government arrived in Berlin last night from Stuttgart, according to the advices.

The advices also state that former Minister of Justice Shiffer will serve as acting chancellor and that the occupance of the resignations of Major-General Baron von Luettwitz and Colonel Bauer eliminated the military chiefs of the Kapp movement. The provisional Minister of Defence may be General von Seeckt.

The collapse of the general strike at Hamburg also was reported in the dispatches.

Phones Cut Between U. S. Troops and Berlin

Paris, March 20.—Telephonic communication between Berlin and Coblenz has been broken since Thursday night, wires a correspondent from Coblenz.

The above dispatch means that, for the present at least, General Allen, U. S. A., commander of the American army of occupation on the Rhine, is out of direct touch with the German capital. It may be presumed, however, that he is in round-about contact with Ellis L. Dresel, the American commissioner in Berlin.

Two hundred orphans in Alaska are being cared for in a converted salmon factory during the epidemic of influenza, according to word just received by the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society in this city. The number of Baptist medical missionaries to this and other distant points will be increased as a result of the New World Movement campaign for $100,000,000, to be conducted April 25-May 2.

DEMAND POWER IN GERMANY

Dictatorship by the Proletariat Is Sought by Striking Workers

ally unanimous in the opinion that there will be Bolshevism unless the socialist movement is broken within the next few days.

The general strike seems more thorough than at any time since it began and is accompanied by disorders.

Crowds attacked cabs and street cars, dragging men and women passengers into the street. Street cars men were seized and beaten because they did not quit work. There was much shooting in various quarters of the city. On account of the menacing disorders, President Ebert may not return until Sunday night from Stuttgart.

Some of the Baltic troops (supporters of the fallen Kapp regime returned to Berlin Thursday night. They tried to seize a motor car, and fighting followed, in which hand grenades were used.

PUT ON SHABBY CLOTHES.

Attacks by workers upon well-dressed persons became so frequent that many of the middle class discarded linen collars and put on their shabbiest clothes before venturing into the street. One guest at the Adlon Hotel was beaten because he was wearing a fur-lined overcoat.

The power of the workers was increased by the rejection of their strike conditions by representatives of the Ebert government. The leaders of the workmen were told that it was impossible for the government to disarm all troops and policemen at this time, because of the excited condition of the public mind.

The workers held a mass meeting and decided to keep up the general strike until the government granted "concessions." In isolated instances striking workmen were instructed by local leaders to go back to work.

It appears that Germany's fate depends on whether the majority Socialists of workers stand together or the workers follow the independents, who demand and insist upon fulfillment of the radical political and industrial program of the independents, which, among other things, calls for the Soviet system of councils, putting absolute dictatorship into the hands of the proletariat.

HOPE FOR AGREEMENT.

The conservative element of the population is fervently hoping for an amicable agreement between Imperial Chancellor Eugene Schiffer and the Socialist factions, to prevent any further fighting. This hope is strengthened by the suffering from hunger, which is becoming more acute as nearly a week and the poorer classes are feeling the pinch of hunger severely.

Vice-Chancellor Schiffer is not a member of the Socialist party, but is a conservative Democrat. Consequently he has little influence with the Socialist workers.

The streets of Central Berlin were crowded throughout the day and any hostile expressions were heard against the Ebert government as well as against the fallen Kapp regime. So far the Reichswehr (government military police) have been supporting the Ebert government, but it is believed out that these men are professional soldiers. They fight for pay rather than patriotism.

Fears were expressed that they may flop to the Spartacists if sufficient inducement is offered. Vice-Chancellor Schiffer has been notified that the British, French and Belgian governments will recognise only the Ebert government.

American Women in Berlin Face Peril

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND,
Boston American Staff Correspondent.

(Copyright, 1920.)

Berlin, March 19 (Friday, 1:45 p. m.).—The situation here now is such that Washington should try to get out the American women still in Berlin. Some are in a highly nervous wreck.

The Baltic troops, whose withdrawal from Berlin had been demanded by Ebert, have been brought back to save his regime.

BIG STRIKE CONTINUES.

An armored car belonging to the Baltic troops saved three officers in an automobile that was being attacked by a mob in front of the Adlon, Friday, 10 a. m.—The situation here continues critical. The general strike continues. No food trains are reaching Berlin. The capital's electric power is failing completely.

The Ebert-Bauer government has not yet returned. The Majority Socialists and the independents have not yet arrived at an agreement.

More than 100 persons were killed in yesterday's clashes between Captain Erhardt's Baltic troops and mobs around the Brandenburg Gate.

18 KILLED AT HOTEL.

Friday, 9:30 a. m.—Thirteen were killed and nineteen wounded, it is reported, in the shooting in front of the Hotel Adlon and around the Brandenburg Gate late yesterday afternoon.

The fire marshal reports thirty dead and many wounded as a result of the fighting between the forces of Captain Erhardt's Baltic troops and in clashes in various parts of the city yesterday afternoon, and that night casualties are not yet known.

Friday, 10 P. M.—General Von Seeckt, with the Reichswehr (national guard) and the Richarethiswehr (security guard) continues to be master of Berlin after a nervous night frequently broken by the staccato of machine guns and the rattle of rifle fire in various sections of the city.

WOMEN IN PERIL.

Captain Erhardt's troops were quartered in the West End, where again some shooting took place as a result of molestation of the troops by mobs.

Details are unobtainable at this siting, because for the first time since the Kapp coup the telephone of the entire capital is suspended.

Terror Grips Berlin as Troops Shoot Mob

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND,
Boston American Staff Correspondent

Berlin, March 18 (Thursday, 5:15 p. m.).—Captain Erhardt's brigade of Baltic troops who, under the captain's personal command, overthrew the Ebert government at dawn last Saturday, took bloody revenge for the failure of their attempt to restore the monarchy, when they withdrew from the centre of the city, beginning shortly after 4 o'clock this afternoon.

After a remarkable address by their commander, the troops took up marching formation in the Wilhelmstrasse, where they had been acting as a pretorial guard for the Kapp government. With the black, white and red flag (the old imperial colors) flying and headed by a band, they began to march out of the Wilhelmstrasse through Unter Den Linden and the Brandenburg gate, between banks of jeering, hooting, howling civilians who hurled veritable fusillades of denunciations and epithets at them.

HANDKERCHIEFS CAUSED RIOT.

For a time the troops, marching with full war accoutrements, seemed determined to push their way through the throng, but about fifteen minutes before 5 o'clock a portion of the mob suddenly made a rush for the Adlon and burst through the iron barricades barring the entrances.

The alleged excuse for this storming attack on the big hostelry is said to have been that handkerchiefs were waved from a balcony of the hotel eliciting salutes from the troops. This, it is said, so enraged the mob that it turned against the best hotel in Berlin—best hated because it harbors the Entente missions and many other foreigners, and is also the rendezvous many of the old-time officers.

The Baltic troops thereupon turned from near the Brandenburg gate and fired into the crowd rushing through the Adlon entrances. The mob dispersed, panic-stricken.

I was in a balcony overlooking the Wilhelmstrasse and Brandenburg and the famous gate, about twelve minutes after the marines and officers, not only 2,000 rifles, the rest consisting of machine guns, minethrowers, artillery and trench mortars, had passed.

At 6 o'clock Friday night Captain Erhardt was with the office of the Minister of Defence. He announced:

"Ich machte die schweinerei nicht mich." (Literally translated: "I refuse to follow this gang of pigs any further," meaning the Social-Democratic government.)

He declared he would overthrow the government next morning, and dared any one to arrest him. Baron von Muenfeld of the Crown Prince's entourage at Wieringen, arrived on the scene, "thinking" Hunenfeld declared to me that he was authorized by the ex-Crown Prince to tell Kapp that Friedrich Wilhelm would have nothing to do with the movement.

Hunenfeld, however, remained and worked with the Kapp government until last (Wednesday) night. Today he has ceased to be any longer belonging to the ex-Crown Prince's entourage and would not return to Wieringen.

This is the man who, with Kapp, Luettwitz, Colonel Bauer and General Lincoln since last Wednesday night.

DEMAND SOVIET.

Berlin Woke up this morning after four days of nightmare to find themselves disinherited in which the Communists and Independent Socialists were calling for a soviet republic. Now the Berlinere see themselves confronted with another dictatorship.

Ludigdorff. It now appears, saw with his strategic eye within 24 hours that the Monarchists' game was up. There were no joyous cheers or shouts for the "saviors of Germany," nor demands for the return of the old regime. Such manifestations had been, no doubt, expected by the Militarist usurpers.

Lloyd George was much frequented by the chancellory, and endeavored to persuade Kapp, Colonel Bauer and Luettwitz to save themselves of the "best way out."

Kapp received a telegram to Kapp arrived, urging the usurper to withdraw and restore the constitutional government. It became clear that there was talk of fighting to the bitter end, but the hopelessness of such a course, in the face of the outraged indignation of all Germany, drove the conspirators to flight.

Confusion began to show in the Chancellory early Wednesday afternoon. At 4 o'clock Kapp emerged a wild scurrying about, hasty packing and words for Colonel Bauer's package. Something like a panic entered the hearts of the men who had dared to defy the will of the people.

Dr. Kapp's daughter overheard the words, grew red in the face and remarked:

"You are triumphing, gentlemen."

Kapp's proclamation. It reached the New York office of Universal Service Saturday afternoon, enabling it to open its wires with it and thus "beating the world" with the first authoritative document of the militarist revolution.)

It was Lincoln who greeted the Kapp troops as they marched in through the Brandenburg Gate. It was Lincoln who moved freely at will through the military settings, barring overzeous cue, and it was Lincoln who staged all the shifting scenes and acts at the Chancellor's palace.

It now seems clear that the hope of Field Marshal von Hindenburg's support was the keystone of the Kapp-Luettwitz plans. This hope was knocked out when Hindenburg not only refused his support but urged Dr. Kapp to retire and restore the constitution.

Members of the Kapp party assert that their plans had not yet fully matured when the coup came, but that the overthrow of the Ebert regime was precipitated prematurely by Captain Erhardt, of the Erhardt Brigade, consisting of 7,000 men.

DARED ARREST.

The weakness of the old government and its lack of popularity is best shown by the fact that it was overthrown by this brigade, made up of officers, marines and officers, not only 2,000 rifles, the rest consisting of machine guns, minethrowers, artillery and trench mortars.

At 6 o'clock Friday night Captain Erhardt was with the office of the Minister of Defence. He announced:

DYNAMITE ICE TO CLEAR RIVERS

Snow and Rain Swell Streams, Already Near the High Water Marks

for today. Sunday probably fair and warmer.

Woodward's Bridge, over the Taunton River, about six miles below Middleboro, was under more than two feet of water, and was closed to traffic. A large number of other bridges farther down the river were said to be in danger, and warnings have been sent out that the limit of rise has not been reached.

THREE MILLS CLOSED.

The Taunton cotton mill, the Winthrop mill and the Nemasket mill at East Taunton have been forced to close, the water having flooded their boiler rooms. The river at that point rose four feet in twenty-four hours.

At Dedham the Maverick street bridge was still holding today, although said to be in a precarious condition. Bags of soft coal were used in battered it against the attacks of the Charles, having been placed by workmen from the mills of the Dedham Finishing Company.

A number of streets were impassable, and embankments were erected around the plant of the pumping station.

TWO BRIDGES IN DANGER.

At Needham much fear was expressed for the safety of the South Natick dam, which is holding back thousands of tons of ice. The bridge is under water, and was reported to be wavering, while the trestle bridge of the New Haven was also in danger of being carried away.

The Street Department used dynamite on the ice in the lake at the Day bridge on Chestnut street, while the bridge at Great Plains avenue causeway was inundated.

At Athol the South Main street bridge was being closely watched by Superintendent of Streets Forbes and a gang of men, who dynamited a channel under the bridge.

At Ayer, New Hampshire, the water washed out the tracks of the Bay State railway, flooded a number of cellars and caused a delay on the Brockton division of the New Haven.

TO RELEASE FREIGHT CARS.

As an energetic effort was started today to release loaded cars held at New Haven Railroad terminals and sidings. h'e drive will continue through next week, and results are expected, notwithstanding the fresh floods which has hit the hard-pressed system.

Thousands of railroad men were at work. Many companies of infantry, of volunteers, in response to the appeal of the Chamber of Commerce and Public Safety Committee. In many cities and towns big manufacturing plants loaned their workmen for the use of the relief committees.

Providence Chamber of Commerce followed the lead of the Boston Chamber in appealing to its members to help relieve the freight congestion. Manufacturers no longer belong hesitating like action included the Manufacturers' Association of Connecticut and the Hartford Chamber of Commerce.

Marlboro Still Pumping in City Hall Basement

Marlboro, March 20.—The troubles of city engineers, who for the past week have been attempting to pump out the basement of City Hall, were increased today by the storm. The four inches of snow that fell during the night began to thaw, and the water seeped into the cellar. Engineers of the Water Department fear that it will be necessary to keep the pumps going until th first of May, as the boiler room of the City Hall is apparently one of the lowest spots in the city.

The Boston and Worcester Street Railway kept plows working all night, with the result that their lines were kept open.

Marlboro has been cut off from Westboro for six weeks, however.

SUES FOR $10,000 FOR MELROSE MAN'S DEATH

Morris Libowitz and the Quality Meat Shop of Melrose have been sued for $10,000 by Ellen M. Lovell, administratrix of the estate of Edward L. Lewis of Melrose. On July 9, 1919, the deceased was thrown from a truck owned by the defendants and received injuries which caused his death.

BLEYER'S WIFE TRIED TO BREAK HIS 'AFFAIR' WITH MRS. RANDALL

'VAMPIRE' LAVISHED LOVE IN RETURN FOR HIS ABUSE

Chicago, March 20.—Ruth Randall's romance with Captain Clifford Bleyer is just one year old as related in this instalment of her fascinating diary, and she despairingly sums up her conflicting emotions at the time in the following significant paragraph:

"I have sinned in my blindness and paid too much in return. What's the use of being straight with Clifford? * * * My common sense tells me he is through, and my heart will not listen to my mind. I want Cliff just as I always have wanted him. I have never yet had from Cliff what I wanted of him—love and kindness lavished upon me, and yet I keep hoping that some day he will care enough to embrace me first."

RUTH RANDALL'S DIARY.

CHAPTER IX.

April 11, 1919—My Cliff telegraphed that he will return next week. He has a captaincy.

April 12—In my room, 501, at Bradford, with my nice ash tray beside me holding a cigarette, my little alarm clock and my reading lamp. Have just been out to the bathroom, water doesn't run, but the cockroaches do. I don't think I like a hotel.

April 18.—Oh! My Cliff is home. He looks fine. And I'm so proud of him. Had a lot to drink on the train before he met me. I thought this separation would have broken the shell, but it hasn't. I am still his slave, as I always have been. Still foolishly in love with him.

April 28.—I told Cliff I wanted to keep on selling war bonds, but he said no, he didn't want me to do that, so now I have nothing to do. Yesterday went to Englewood, bought a plant and had it sent to mother with no word. Later in Carson's met her. She was passing close by me and I reached out and put my hand on her arm. She said she didn't see me—nothing about the plant—though she may not have seen it yet, but she'll know it was from me. She held out her hand and said quite formally, "Why, how do you do?" It pains me to think of her so alone. Also saw Luke Mitchell, is married and has a baby. Talks more than any woman.

May 3.—Letter from Dad. I wrote telling him about Cliff and that he would take age with him if he is to this country, and we'd have official wedding.

BROKEN UP A HOME.

May 18.—Some young chap I didn't recognize asked me about Norm and said he left three weeks ago for some camp.

May 27.—2 p. m.—My Cliff left this morning before I was up. Left a note. Has grown off loose again. Thank you, dear God!

June 3, Monday, 11 a. m.—By all the gods, as I was returning home from breakfast this morning I saw a woman who looked just like Cornelia, so much like her as I remember, that it brought the old ache—pain—with it enough, it was our poor old Cornelia. She is now the wife of Jack Hast saw her, ten or fifteen years ago. She said my mother was such a dreadful lady. I have the most lonesome Sundays, always alone.

June 9.—2 p. m.—Cliff just phoned. Has Paulette downtown with him. Andree is ill, has been for several days. Poor woman. God help her. I surely wish I could meet her.

June 17—Pat my Cliff on train for Washington yesterday.

June 15—Phoned father. Told him I had write from Cliff, sick. I wonder if he is. He may be only drunk. Father said I have broken up a home. Things had to stop. Andree is going to the hospital today. She knows about everything and is very unhappy. God help and bless Andree.

I long to see and talk to her. Father said only I could make Cliff be good and that I should not call him I know I am father. Not true. Cliff was bad. I was trying to make him worthy.

June 5—Friday. Cora phoned. Cora said mamma was living on the income of $50 and $60 a week. It's awful. She is almost blind in one eye. My God, what awful misfortunes will befall us all!

June 18.—Telegram from Cliff. He'll be home Thursday at 9 a. m. Oh, I'm so glad.

A YEAR'S ROMANCE.

June 20—Just a year ago today that I met my Cliff. Had a telegram last night to stick to travel, so I won't see my boy. I'm nearly insane now. Phoned father; said we were fools to take Paulette. That Cliff has told everything. (I don't know what she could tell.) Andree has a lawyer who is investigating things, and if it doesn't stop there will be an arrest. In the last six months I have not had been earned and if things aren't different, he will be cut off. God help me. I'll never see him again.

June 26—My Cliff phoned Monday. Sore because I didn't see him. Tuesday I wouldn't see him either. We had dinner at Pat's Monday night. My poor Cliff just phoned. Says he'll see me. I'll see him. He begs—will do something desperate! God, oh, God, help me!

December 11—I am miserable, despairing. Last night we had a party with—there's no use writing. Bonds and Cliff told the worst stories he knows. I was ashamed and disgusted, and left the room to go to my own.

After saying things insulting he got, up and lit into me. And if it hadn't been for Pinber I'd been bruised. Then I was called things.

December 14—Friday, the 13th, is lucky. I phone my Cliff and he is not at home. Dad and he are out for dinner and was with me all night. I have prayed every breath, every sigh, every heart-beat has been a prayer. Oh, what utter despair I have experienced.

THEY VISIT NEW YORK.

December 22, — New York City! Great and grand! Ah! In bon city. Yipee N. Y. I am delighted, stupefied, amazed, thrilled—I feel a dozen different emotions. Cliff and I arrived Thursday, 11th, 6 p. m. Stopped at Martha Washington one night, and are now at No. 33 West Twenty-sixth street. Have nice big room, with mouse in it.

I have seen so much and am excited all the time. We went to the Long Island today, but will be back in a few minutes. I have taken but two days and today rode on the "L" north and then went south to Greenwich Village looking for a flat.

It's raining and I'm all wet. I'm exquisitely happy with Cliff and hope and pray we may stay this. This is a wonderful town. How can people live elsewhere? I wound my clock last night with Cliff's arms around me. The last time I wound that it was so unlucky. Cliff left for death and wondered sadly where I'd be next time.

Cliff is hustling around to get a job, and I must do the same tomorrow, and on how I hate to work when there is so much to see!

December 25, Christmas, 6:30 p. m. —In a cheap dining room alone with my drink, and Christmas tree in front of me, and a full bottle and cold water running. Most of me is dead. I can forget Cliff has gone to escort Mrs. Asax home. He went this noon and now and again.

SHE JOINS RED CROSS.

Dinner at the Astor. Mama wrote yesterday, nothing from Cecile. Gave my Cliff gloves. My Cliff gave me two petticoats, slippers and "money for the cheap skate." I won't forget that for a long time. Merry Christmas! Merry hell! Started work yesterday. The Red Cross, Atlantic Division, answering phone. Telling sad parents where their wounded are.

December 31—The New Year's Whistles are blowing. I am alone. Cliff has just sent wire wishing me Happy New Year and sending love. My Cliff! My Cliff! How I wish I were in your arms.

Freedom is not good for me, nor do I want it. Only Cliff. And the little candles are burning out. The whistles will blow. Oh, my little Christmas tree last year is in storage. Next year I won't send your gift put out the lights.

Will God put out the one next year?

January 6, 1919—Chicago—Waiting for Cliff to phone as usual. I am so happy and thrilled from him for more than 24 hours. I am so unhappy. Cliff's mother is ill. I don't know. My home coming was not full of glee. I am slimly unfit for work and I'm tired of lonesome Sundays, always alone.

June 19, p. m.—Cliff just phoned. Has Paulette downtown with him. Andree is ill, has been for several days. Poor woman. God help her. I surely wish I could meet her.

June 17—Pat my Cliff on train for Washington yesterday.

Vanderbilt Heiress Is Seeking Divorce

Duchess of Marlborough, formerly Consuelo Vanderbilt of New York, who has filed suit in London leading to a divorce.

London, March 20.—A suit for the restitution of conjugal rights, which in the British courts is invariably the first step toward a divorce petition, has been filed by the Duchess of Marlborough, who was Consuelo Vanderbilt of New York.

The Marlboroughs have not been living together for several years. The Duchess' parents are William K. Vanderbilt, Sr., and Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont. Mrs. Belmont has just arrived in London.

SCORES RUSH OF DIVORCE SUITS

Counsel Defends Cleland, Accused of Cruelty by Wife; Nickerson Decree Stands

"Today the institution of marriage is seriously threatened. Never has there been such a time as the women have enjoyed such luxuries as today. They rush to the lawyers' offices seeking divorces for incompatability. Divorce is as common an incident now as the purchase of a yeast cake. The time has come to protect the sanctity of the home."

These remarks were addressed to Judge Sanderson in the contested divorce court at East Cambridge, by Representative Samuel W. Mc-Call, who is arguing against the granting of a divorce to Mrs. Fanny P. Cleland of Newton.

SAYS LIFE THREATENED.

Mrs. Cleland sought a divorce from her husband, Frederick K. Cleland, now of Hartford, Ct., on the grounds of cruelty.

She declared that he twice threatened her life, and that as the result of these threats and other cruelties she became a nervous wreck.

Her husband denied that he had ever abused his wife. "I worked on an average of eight days a week. I turn my pay envelope unopened and gave her $10 a week to spend," he declared.

March 5.—9 a. m.—Cliff just phoned. Was not here last night or night before. He was full when he left night before. Will see him Saturday noon. Came home with me long enough to shave and left.

BEING PAID FOR SINS.

I have sinned a lot and am being paid too much in return. What's the use of being straight with Cliff? He won't give me enough money to even pay the milk bill or anything. What little he does give me I do not spend on myself. But there is always money for his whiskey.

March 21.—Cliff breakfast alone. Always alone. Saturday morning Cliff left here and I called but saw him until Wednesday at dinner. He went with me to Town's, No. 1014 Michigan Ave., and watched me drink and was more courteous than usual (to me). Had a few drinks out. No more whiskey in this house. Cliff said he had no money.

My common-sense tells me Cliff is through, and my heart will not listen to my mind. I want Cliff just as I have always wanted him. My Cliff. I have never yet had from Cliff what I want—love and kindness lavished upon me, and yet I keep hoping that some day he will care enough to embrace me first.

GEDDES COMING TO U. S. IN APRIL

New British Ambassador Long the Right Hand Man of Premier

London, March 20.—Sir Auckland Geddes, British Ambassador-elect to the United States, hopes to be in Washington by the middle of April. Winding up his work at the Board of Trade, which he conceived the idea for rehabilitating Europe, including the extension of economic aid to Germany, he has been exceedingly busy.

Premier Lloyd George is parting with Sir Auckland's Cabinet services reluctantly. Many persons profess to make no secret of the fact that Sir Auckland stands almost head and shoulders above most of the Premier's other colleagues in the ministry, both in breadth of mental outlook and strength of character. Sir Auckland differs from his brother, Sir Eric, who is regarded as an organizing genius and a "one-idea man."

CHIEF BULWARK OF PREMIER.

Sir Auckland has been one of the Premier's chief bulwarks. A Canadian physician of anatomy who lived up with the colors early in the war, he was practically unknown here in 1916. He was severely wounded in one of the battles on the Somme and was convalescing when Lloyd George, seeking clean with his new broom as Premier, decided to remedy British recruiting and "clean out the funk holes."

The French had alleged that the British were not recruiting all their available men. Sir Auckland, with two years of French warfare to his credit, became director of recruiting at the British War Office, and his work was so thorough that even the French were satisfied.

He became minister of national service, then president of the food government board, one of the four most important posts in the Cabinet. Still later he was appointed minister of reconstruction when it became necessary to deal with post-war problems. Finally, he was appointed president of the board of trade to get Britain's industries and commerce going once more.

IS BIG MAN PHYSICALLY.

Sir Auckland is a big man physically—six feet tall and broad-shouldered. He has the appearance of ruggedness, with a strong square jaw and big hands. His hair is thin and gray, partially bald. The only modern-like things about him are his deep-set eyes behind large horn-rimmed glasses. Sir Auckland's friends say he is not a bit aloof or "up stage."

He is married and the father of five children. His transition from an obscure university professor of anatomy to a soldier and then to statesman was quick and full of action.

In religion Sir Auckland is a tolerant Protestant. In business affairs he is direct and frank. One of his sons married the Earl of Ilchester's daughter Nancy Astor. She has given him her full support in political matters and is reported to have urged his appointment as ambassador upon Premier Lloyd George.

Sir Auckland's wife is a retiring "home maker," who finds all her time fully occupied after her family. She does not care for society. She is an Irish-American by birth.

TO EXPLAIN SCOPE OF 2.75 BEER BILL

Those who favor the bill now pending in the Massachusetts Legislature limiting the manufacture and sale of 2⅞ per cent. beer are about to inaugurate a State-wide educational campaign with regard to this matter, in order to contradict the impression that if this bill is passed it will bring about a return to conditions that if this bill is passed it will bring about a return to conditions existing before the adoption of the Federal prohibition amendment.

This bill, even though passed by both House and Senate and signed by the Governor, will be inoperative if the United States Supreme Court upholds the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead enforcement act, for either of these are declared unconstitutional after the passage of the bill, then the laws of ninety-five will be free to resume the manufacture of 2⅞ per cent. beer and ale.

WARD FIVE TO AID AMERICANIZATION

Mayor Peters has been requested to appoint a citizen of Ward Five to his Citizens' Committee for Americanism, by James E. Welch Post No. 86, American Legion. This post, which is made up entirely of young men from the West End, believes that the accomplishment of this task ward entitles them to recognition.

Another resolution of the post is addressed to the Public Lands Committee of the City Council., it is in support of the request made by Rev. John F. Linehey organization, a gathering of young men named in honor of a priest who paid the supreme sacrifice, that Merrimac Square hereafter be known as John F. Linehey Square. Another McKnight Homestead Bill is also endorsed by the post.

USE BOGUS DOLLARS TO BUY BAD BEER

New York, March 20.—Bad dollars for bad beer, this was the condition revealed here when purveyors of the latter attempted to deposit some of the former in a bank. It was found that $5,000 in such counterfeit like the genuine article, were made up of about 8 per cent. silver, the balance being aluminum. The beer, it was revealed, was of even poorer quality than the dollars.

AUBURN MURDER DEFENCE OPENS

Companion of Married Victim Becomes Hysterical While on Witness Stand

Auburn, Me., March 20.—The prosecution in the trial of Rufus S. Penley of Lisbon, charged with causing the death of Mrs. Clara M. French, by an illegal operation, has rested its case and Attorney Morey is today presenting the case of the defense.

The chief witness, Mrs. Eva Stover, for the prosecution, caused an interruption of the proceedings when stricken by hysterics toward the close of her testimony. Since the start of the trial she has spent most of the time weeping.

She related how she and the victim visited the home of Penley, January 16, when it is alleged the operation was performed. Mrs. Stover says Penley and Mrs. French went to an upper floor in the house and Penley called to Mrs. Stover shortly after their departure.

Mrs. Stover says she went to the room which Mrs. French entered with Penley, and found Mrs. French dying. The witness claimed she wanted to summon a physician but was prevented by Penley. Mrs. Stover claimed she was carrying the victim's body down the stairs when Penley seemed frightened by the fatality, she dropped Mrs. French's feet and ran from the house, summoning a physician.

Open War on Tangoers in Diaphanous Gowns

Paris, March 20.—War to the bitter end has been started between legitimate fox-trotters and the midnight tangoers whose revels have been threatening the peace and happiness of the fashionables.

Fox-trotters and other patrons of fashionable restaurants of Montmartre, are determined to crush the tangoers who seek gloried in the profession of making love, where, until dawn, they revel in palatial restaurants and diaphanous gowns, while oriental perfumes float through the air and champagne flows freely at $24 a bottle.

The fox-trotters' movement was started by the 10 o'clock closing order which resulted in a strike by Montmartre restaurant proprietors. Many proprietors of both ends met under its provisions.

Last night the silent Palace Pigalle, the resort of former payetty, was filled with irate fox-trotters, who, led by recalcitrant cafe proprietors, marched upon certain hidden places where dancing was going on behind thick curtains and double doors.

The tangoers, evicted and obliged to return home by the 10 o'clock curfew, while the fox-trotters danced on. Many of those present who had received in Washington. She told me little except to say jokingly, "I'll be back in April to have my jewels anyway, and they will go down with me."

Arthur Hammerstein's secretary said the theatrical manager also had received one of the anonymous written warnings, posted in Washington. She said that it warned that the impending visit was incompetent.

A member of Mr. Morosco's family said several warnings had been received by him, some from friends, others anonymous.

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 20.—The 400 employees of the Pittsburgh-Butler and Harmony Consolidated Railway & Power Company and its subsidiary lines are to be given $1,000,000 worth of common stock in the company in a profit-sharing plan which became known today.

The employes will have a representation of three on the board of directors. An old age pension fund and a sick benefit fund are also to be established. The company will give the plan a tryout for five years. During that time the stock will be held under a trust agreement. It is said to be the first time in America that a profit-sharing plan for street car men has been adopted.

MURDER AFTER SLUR AT BABY

Evans Confesses He Killed Wife With Reins During Fit of Anger

New Britain, Ct., March 20.—Because his wife made a slurring remark about their baby boy George Evans choked her with toy reins, he has confessed to the police.

The confession was brought here from Bellevue Hospital, New York, where Evans is confined after his attempt at suicide.

Evans told the police of his wife's alleged infidelity, and of how he tried last Tuesday to persuade her to have nothing to do with other men.

Evans described the placing of his wife's body in a trunk in their home and told of going to New York city and of attempting suicide after a night made sleepless by remorse.

CHINESE LABOR ON IMPERATOR

Class of Stokers Taken by Some to Be Reason for Warnings Sent to Passengers

New York, March 20.—"Hello! hello! Is this Greeley 3590?"

"Yes."

"Let me talk to Mr. Murphy, please."

"This is Mr. Murphy."

"Mr. Patrick Francis Murphy who engaged passage on the Imperator?"

"The same."

"Well, Mr. Murphy, I shouldn't like to see you sail on that vessel. Something is going to happen to the Imperator. Take my advice—cancel your passage."

This is the sort of anonymous message that has come over the telephone and in written form to prominent men and women of this and other cities who were about to embark on the Cunard liner Imperator from this port to Southampton, England, on March 6 last.

As told in cable dispatches yesterday, the German Government, later American, now British liner, crawled into her berth at Southampton on Thursday, three days overdue. From Sunday evening until she docked, the Imperator was virtually helpless, with a total of forty-five dead. Several members of the crew were killed, according to passengers, and many first class staterooms damaged.

CHINESE FIREMEN HIRED.

Although no statement as to the Imperator's mishap was obtainable at the local offices of the Cunard Line, independent investigation resulted in the development of a marine mystery second only to that of the Lusitania's last voyage.

Unlike the case of the Lusitania, however, no motive could possibly be suggested (save one and that feeble) for the mysterious warning messages to would-be passengers.

The one possible explanation was that the Cunard Line's recent employment of Chinese as firemen and coal passers caused sufficient uneasiness in certain Americans to bring forth the warnings that came to Mr. Murphy, Mary Hammerstein, Mary Nash and other passengers.

The U. S. transport America was put in dance by the Chinese firemen and coal passers who endeavored to pile the ashes so that the ship had a dangerous list. Captain Ford, commander of the vessel, and the commander of the transport on which he had received in Washington. She told me little except to say jokingly, "I'll be back in April to have my jewels anyway, and they will go down with me."

Arthur Hammerstein's secretary said the theatrical manager also had received one of the anonymous written warnings, posted in Washington. She said that it warned that the impending visit was incompetent.

A member of Mr. Morosco's family said several warnings had been received by him, some from friends, others anonymous.

DELAY IN CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CASE GRANTED

Robert E. Buffum of counsel for the directors of the Christian Science Church appeared before Judge DeCourcy and moved that the time of filing exceptions to the report of Judge Frederic Dodge as master, expiring today, be extended to March 29. Buffum is associated with Senator John L. Bates in Washington and the illness of W. A. Dane, who had taken the case to the Supreme Court.

Sherman L. Whipple, for the trustee of the Christian Science Publishing Society, and Edward Farrell Thompson, for John V. Dittemore, opposed the postponement delay on the ground that under present conditions it was important that the litigation should be ended and that exceptions should be brought to a speedy conclusion.

After a conference it was agreed that counsel for the directors should have further time. Judge DeCourcy said that the hearing before the master was not difficult to meet by exceptions, and directed that exceptions be filed on or before Thursday next. Judge DeCourcy observed that if counsel for the trustees and Mr. Dittmore desired to have the case put on the list for March 26, on consenting the master's report it might be done, but he should not make an order.

PRAISE 'TENANTS LEAGUE' AS WORTHY PLAN TO END RENT GOUGING

UNITED PUBLIC SENTIMENT BACKS HAYS' MEASURE

to bring relief to the tenants of the Commonwealth, while giving the landlords a square deal.

BILLINGS FAVORS PLAN.

One of the first to congratulate the American on the formation of the league and to endorse the aims of the movement was Collector of the Port of Boston Edmund Billings. Another was Henry G. Wells, formerly president of the Massachusetts Senate.

No bill presented in recent years has attracted the wide attention of Representative Martin Hays' anti-rent profiteering bill. The fact that this measure assures owners of real property a net return of 10 per cent. on their investment, amply protects the landlords and assures them of fair play, while its provisions that profiteering shall be punished by a heavy fine or imprisonment, that no rents shall be raised without petition to the Superior Court, that all eviction cases be tried by jurist in the Superior Court, that tenants at will have protection, and that holders of leases wishing to renew be assured of protection, place a steel rail of safety around every tenant of every class of property.

MARTIN'S ENDORSEMENT.

Here are a few samples of the many endorsements of the aims of the Hays bill, and of the aims of the Boston American Tenants' League:

John J. Martin, vice-president Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange and president Exchange Trust Company:

"A 10 per cent. return on a real estate investment is all that any investor can ask. Many are receiving less. It is deplorable there should be rent profiteering, and every effort should be made to curb it. Special efforts should be made to encourage new building. Land around Boston has not increased in price since before the war. Building materials, although higher, are still reasonable in price.

"I heartily favor any proposition to curb rent profiteering, and say again that I consider a 10 per cent. net return a most liberal one."

BILLINGS LAUDS AMERICAN.

Edmund Billings, Collector of the Port, said: "Any reasonable step to put a stop to the conscienceless profiteering of tenement landlords has my hearty support and sympathy. I am glad that the American is attacking this problem with that vigor and determination which it always exerts in its efforts in behalf of the oppressed and unfortunate in the community. The people who pay rents have reason to congratulate themselves upon their champion in this matter. I offer my personal congratulations to the American."

Henry G. Wells, a member of the Department of Public Utilities, a former president of the Senate and former district attorney of Essex County, said of the plan:

A GOOD MOVE.

"The organization of a tenants' league is a step in the right direction of putting the tenants on an equitable basis in their dealings with landlords. Organized public sentiment very often can accomplish the purpose which is impossible of accomplishment because of inadequate laws. Concerted action is always more effective. Individual complaints command little or no attention. A league of tenants will clear the atmosphere and distinguish between unreasonable and fair landlords."

President Orville S. Waldron of the West Somerville Civic Association said: "I believe it a mighty good thing. There should be a curb put to the profiteering. I go to New York frequently on business and I know of business places where rents were less than 1914 has been advanced from 66 to 125 per cent., a tremendous advance, which is nothing less than profiteering.

RENT PROFITEERING.

"A friend of mine with three display rooms in Boston had his rent advanced $1,400 a year, but he moved out and got a better rent in another location.

"I will bring the Hays bill to the attention of the association at their next meeting for consideration by the members."

Dr. Francis F. Silva, president of the Charlestown Improvement Association said: "I believe the Hays bill a good one. I believe in any bill that will help the landlord and also treat the tenant fairly, as the tenant is the one in the end who pays the bills. Ten per cent. on his investment, in my opinion, is enough for any landlord."

THE DUTY OF RENT PAYERS.

John J. ailey, secretary of the Dorchester Board of Trade, real estate broker and former city assessor for many years, said:

"I heartily indorse the Boston American's plan of forming a Tenants' League, and I hope the rent payers of Dorchester will join with their hearty co-operation, as in unions there is strength.

"Many a rent payer who occupies a home doesn't display the proper interest. For instance, the Board of Trade recently had killed the bill to make the tenants light back halls and received very little support from the one that would have to pay the bills. Now rent payers have the chance to organize in a strong body, and I hope they take advantage of the American's offer, and get together.

"The demands of a body will be listened to a great deal more readily than those of an individual. Tenants should organize the same as business men and show the proper spirit and so get the American's movement for their good."

Frederick M. Hoyt, acting president of the Harvard Improvement Association, said:

"The Harvard Improvement Association will hold a directors' meeting this evening. It is my intention to bring before the members the plans of the Boston American's Tenants' League, as well as many other matters of importance to the community which our organization represents, such as the collection of ashes and garbage in this district, only two collections having been made since January."

Lawrence to Collect "Gougers'" Back Taxes

Lawrence, March 20. — The first direct move against profiteering landlords will be made by the immediate collection of back taxes. The list of delinquents contains the names of landlords who are said to have been overcharging in rents.

The amounts owed by these landlords vary between $266 and $1,000, according to Mayor White. It is claimed that the Lawrence property owners are improving their property at the expense of the city by using the money which they owe.

The assessors will ascertain the exact amount of rental when they make their rounds. They will be sworn in as justices of the peace so that they can administer oaths to landlords whom they question about the rentals.

New Bedford Labor Men Laud American's 'League'

New Bedford, March 20.—Abraham Binns, president of the Textile Council, a man who has spent many years of his life working in behalf of legislation of benefit to the wage earner, heartily endorsed the efforts of the Boston American to stamp out rent profiteering in the Commonwealth, and spoke in favor of the Hays bill. He said:

"While it gives no honest landlord a right to complain, the Hays bill ought to do a great deal toward relieving rents, but I am afraid preventing them from going higher than they already are.

"Thirteen thousand members of trade unions affiliated with the textile council share the opinions of their president."

PRAISES AMERICAN.

Arthur N. Hardiman, chairman of the committee appointed by the various labor organizations of the city to investigate rent profiteering and seek means of relief, said:

"The American is in the right direction. Once it is adopted, an effort should be made to simplify the machinery of getting to the court to the courts by tenants who may be profiteered. Then the landlords will be somewhat more satisfactory. The Boston American is doing a great work in bringing the tenants of the State together and forming them into an organization which will be capable of bringing an end to all profiteering in realty."

LANDLORDS SUMMONED.

As the direct result of Mr. Hardiman's action in calling the special State Commission on the Necessities of Life hold a hearing on the housing situation here a week ago, several real estate holders have been ordered to appear before the commission again at the State House next Monday, bringing papers and whatever else may be needed by the commission in getting the information they seek as to the landlords' method of fixing rents.

The Weavers' Protective Association, the largest single labor organization in the city, unanimously endorsed the idea of a tenants' union. Other labor unions will hold meetings to consider similar action.

Haverhill Leaders in Favor of Rent Bill

Haverhill, March 20.—Real estate men, business and civic leaders, as well as labor officials, have endorsed the Hays rent bill and anti-profiteering. Following are a few of those in favor of the measure:

Mayor Charles D. Cross, Alderman Ernest Manning, Police Captain Marcus Sullivan, Oliver S. Hubbard, agent Haverhill Co-operative Bank; District Fire Chief Ernest Hapgood, John Heffernan, Placid Morin, Barbers; Samuel Wilkins, Hackmen; Hamden Auto Mart, Haverhill Motor Mart, Merrimack Club, Larchmont Club, Central Labor Union, Jacob Seckman, William J. Langton, Philip Langway, William Brown and Shoe Workers' Protective Union.

Also William Ryan, agent packers; William White, agent cutters; Austin Gill, agent cutters; Albert Galvin, assistant agent Local 34; David Bancroft, agent wood heel makers; James Hayes, sole leather workers; Roy Pothier, agent turn workmen; Harvey Davis, assistant agent, Local 34; Leon Jutras, agent boxmakers; Neil P. Monahan, secretary American Association; P. J. Mahoney, real estate; Dennis Donovan, real estate; Moses Schlanan, merchant; William Martel, laundryman.

Lawrence Mayor Backs Hays' Rent Measure

Lawrence, March 20.—Mayor White of this city, one of the first municipal executives in New England to rebuke rent profiteers, has the following to say i relation to the Martin Hays bill:

"It is gratifying to note that the days of rent receiving in which profiteering landlords are reaping more than their share from the family purse, that Massachusetts legislators are taking the lead in seeking to remedy conditions with adequate laws. The Hays bill assures the landlord a fair return on his money and leaves politics out of the situation entirely.

"While the bill might appear drastic it is necessary that a drastic method be employed to end quickly such selfish tenant-grabbing as is going on in many places. I wish to commend the motive of this bill for the purpose it carries. I want to be counted on any movement which will help the people of this Commonwealth and my own people of Lawrence."

Co-operative Banks to Come to Aid of Renters

The State League of Co-operative Banks will launch a drive to assist victims of rent gougers to buy their own homes on easy terms. Edward N. Swain, head of the league, said at the Boston City Club that the "buy-a-home" movement was the only one which would ultimately rescue the rent payer from the clutches of the profiteer.

D. Arthur Brown, director in several co-operative banks, agreed with Mr. Swain. He urged the bankers to advertise in the newspapers as the quickest way of making sales and aiding themselves and the public.

Mr. Swain, in depicting the woes of the rent payer, said: "A man singing 'Home Sweet Home' in a flat is kidding himself and serenading the landlord."

Yale won the twelfth annual triangular debate by defeating Harvard at New Haven and Princeton at New Jersey. The Harvard team at Cambridge, debating negatively, vanquished Princeton, and would have clinched the debate had their representatives at New Haven succeeded in downing Yale. The question was: "Resolved, That Congress should adopt all measures necessary for the suppression of all propaganda for the overthrow of the United States government."

MAYOR ASKS FOR $11.52 TAX LIMIT

Tells Legislators City Will Lose $1,000,000 in Revenue Unless Increase Is Permitted

In a plea for a tax limit of $11.52 for next year, Mayor Peters told assembled Boston senators and Representatives at the Hotel Bellevue that $10,800,000 in valuation is lost to the city by a change in the law by which the merchandise of corporations is taxed by the State. The Assessors estimate that this will mean nearly $1,000,000 less in revenue this year besides lessening the borrowing capacity.

State returns will partly offset this loss, the Mayor said, although he added that the tax limit he sought would still leave a deficit in next year's budget of $357,000 to be made up out of surplus in the treasury. He fixed next year's expenses at $23,125,000 without allowing for any increases in salaries or materials.

The Mayor defended his action in piling up a big surplus in the treasury, saying without it the budget would have been $1,800,000 for the first year. City councillors recently attacked him for creating such a big surplus, saying he intended to use it as a campaign argument to further his alleged gubernatorial ambitions.

"If this increase in the tax limit from $10.52 to $11.52 is not allowed it will mean that we will have to discontinue a considerable portion of the city's service," he said. The Mayor added that he was as anxious as anyone to keep the tax rate down.

A number of suggestions are made toward relieving the congestion during the hour-hour periods. The letter asks, among other things:

The letter also states that an attempt is put on certain cars in East Boston will be fought to a finish.

To Watch Jersey Booze

Washington, March 20.—The appointment of James A. Edgerton of Sutley, N. J., to be prohibition director for the State of New Jersey was announced here.

March 22 to 27 is "Save Money on Meat Week."

The Department of Justice has set these days aside, and has asked American women, patriotic in peace as in war, to help cut high prices by learning to use the cheaper meats as well at the more expensive.

"How shall Boston women help the campaign along?" was a question put to R. P. McCulloch, authority on meats, who is in charge of one of the departments of a large wholesale and retail meat house in Boston.

CHEAPER CUTS COOKED.

"By buying chuck roasts and hamburg steaks, by buying flank portions of beef, by middle rib cuts and shoulder roasts. The ability to make meat less expensive rests in part with the woman who buys the meat. When we have more demand for the good, serviceable, cheaper cuts, meat will be reduced in price."

Mr. McCulloch then explained the way a beef is cut. "First in halves, across," he said, and then lengthways. Cuts from the hindquarters are the ones for which we have the greatest demand. The forquarter of beef, less prized, contains meat that should, if used, substantially reduce the higher cost of meat."

Certain sections were then discussed. "There is the flank, for instance. The demand for this is so small that many stores are forced to sell this back to the packers. This meat is bought, wholesale, say, at 12 cents a pound. It is sold back for eight cents, at a loss of seven cents.

"Who pays for this loss? The man who buys the steak at 75 cents a pound, of course. The price has to be made up, and it is. Yet, if we could work up a demand for these pieces we could sell excellent rolls of corned beef from it cheaply. Taking the lean meat from this, and combining it with shoulder portions, as good and as fresh and wholesome a hamburg steak as could be desired might be made from these neglected cuts."

THE SECRET OF ECONOMY.

"There are other ways to reduce the cost of meat. A rib steak comes from the chuck. "There used to be a large demand for this, but now it is hardly any. We can sell an excellent chuck or rib steak for from 25 to 30 cents a pound. But we have 100 demands for rump steak at 75 cents a pound to one for a chuck steak at 25."

"Shoulder roast is another cut of meat for which the demand should increase. Properly trimmed and cut it is lean and tender. The public used to the old cuts, doesn't know how good it is—that is the explanation. Out of the chuck, the plate, the middle ribs, the flank, all cheaper and tender secured parts of the forequarter of beef, come any number of possible rolls of beef for corning, for pot roasts, and for cooked right, are quite as appetizing as the more expensive. And they are far more economical."

ASKS ESTATE TAX TO PAY BONUS

New York Congressman Proposes Means of Getting Funds for Veterans

Washington, March 20.—Increase in the Federal estate tax to raise the necessary funds to pay bonuses to the ex-service men was proposed in a statement to the House Ways and Means Committee by Representative MacGregor, Republican, of New York. MacGregor introduced legislation providing that "hereafter no person shall be permitted to devise or bequeath more than a certain amount and that the surplus be paid into the Federal treasury." He suggested that the limit be fixed at $$2,000,000.

Basing his estimates on the 1917 income tax reports, the New York Representative said 3,346 persons in the United States now own fifty-five billions of its wealth; 2,060 persons own twenty billions, and 625 persons own seventeen billions. He added:

"In 1914 there were 10,694 millionaires; in 1918 there were 14,771; in 1914, 21,693, and in 1917, 26,190."

Under the Estate Tax Act of 1916, MacGregor stated, estates pay to the Federal government a tax ranging from 1 per-cent. on estates of not less than $50,000 to 25 per cent. on estates in excess of $10,000,000; in 1919, the government received from this source a revenue of $$3,892,563.

If the surplus of all estates exceeding $2,000,000 were turned over to the government, he said, sufficient revenue would be received to pay the ex-service men liberal bonuses, eliminate the national debt and meet the expenses of the government in the future.

THREE WOMEN AMONG NEW HUB LAWYERS

Eighty-one new aspirants for honors at the bar of this State were sworn in by Judge Dr. Conery of the Supreme Judicial Court at Boston. Three young women, Miss Minnie L. Reed of East Newton street, Boston; Miss Cora E. Abbott of Ballardvale and Miss Anna E. Doherty of No. 39 Dunreath street, Roxbury, were among them.

PROTEST VOICED IN SOUTH END

Residents Want New Municipal Building Hurried and Better Car Service

Close to 500 South End residents attended a mass meeting under the direction of the Pelham Club of Ward 4, held in the Old Franklin School, Washington street, and discussed the proposed new South End municipal building, better car service and better streets for the district.

It developed that close to $200,000 is now available for the new municipal building, which is to be erected at West Dedham street and Shawmut avenue. The citizens voiced their protest against the delay in erecting the building.

The first appropriations for the centre were made during the latter part of Mayor Fitzgerald's administration, according to Vice-President James F. Farrell, who charges Mayor Curley wiverted the appropriation for other purposes. The South End residents now ask that something be done relative to erecting the building.

Charles Leonard, superintendent of Division 1, Boston Elevated, heard the protests against car service in the district. He said that he would communicate the requests to the proper officials and assured the gathering that better car service would probably be effected in the future.

Better street conditions and sanitary alleyways were discussed at length.

The speakers included Senator Thomas F. Donovan, Representative James W. Hays, ex-Representative John F. Sheehan, Dr. Silas Ayer, president of the South End Improvement Association, and James F. Farrell, vice-president of the Pelham Club.

OFFICERS SHIFTED AT NAVY YARD

Secretary Daniels' practice of not allowing naval officers to remain too long in 'any one place has resulted in the transfer of Captain Timothy B. O'Leary and Commander H. E. Stevens, on duty at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The former goes to New York; Captain O'Leary to Norfolk, and Commander Stevens to Philadelphia. Captain Livingston Hunt of Newport succeeds Captain Carpenter and Captain Merrian of Washington succeeds Captain O'Leary.

LUXURY FOUND IN PORTER CAR

Holland System Trading Corporation Gets New England Agency

The Porter, considered by expert motor car engineers the very last word in pleasure car construction, arrived in Boston, Wednesday, and is being shown by Raymond Holland at the Copley-Plaza Hotel.

The chassis at the Copley-Plaza is the one that attracted so much attention at the private salon show at the Commodore in New York. Mr. Holland also has a four-passenger model complete.

PORTER LINE HAS MERIT.

In bringing the Porter line to Boston the Holland System-Trading Corporation is following its well known policy of interesting itself only in lines of proven quality and then as leader has established its claim for merit, to go after and get it.

When the superior quality of the Porter was demonstrated, D. E. Holland, president of the company, decided it would just suit the ultra taste of the particular New Englander who would care more for the quality of the car than the price.

Since here where the arrangements were completed by the Hollands for handling this car and to allow persons coming from all over New England to attend the show an opportunity to see this luxurious car,

BRINGS MODELS TO BOSTON.

Mr. Holland, with characteristic enterprise, jumped the New York train Tuesday p. m., commandeered a special car, put the two models on board, had the car attached to a passenger train and placed them on exhibit as announced.

The features of the Porter are the achievement of all the ideals striven for by American manufacturers which give comfort, luxury, safety and satisfaction. It is another evidence of the lead of America in the motor car field that the world's finest car is distinctly American.

200 AT BANQUET OF C. E. FAY-ALLEN CO'

With two hundred guests at its third annual banquet, the C. E. Fay-Allen Company staged the concluding and in many ways most successful event of show week, Friday noon, at the Copley-Plaza.

The meeting was attended by Maxwell and Chalmers dealers from all parts of the New England territory. This event was the last thing on the Fay-Allen calendar previous to the opening of the half-million dollar automobile home, scheduled to take place as an early date.

F. E. Allen described at great length the remarkable modern facilities and labor-saving equipment of the new salesrooms. The building, including the fixtures and merchandise, will represent an investment exceeding $500,000.

"Nothing has received more thought or expenditure in our plan for a new place of business than the ever growing important question of service," said Mr. Allen.

Following Mr. Allen's brief remarks a wire of regret was read from Mr. Fay, now in California. This was followed by talks from John S. Fitch and L. A. Smith, factory officials.

ONE CAR LINE FOR HYDE PARK

Bay State Trustees Decide to Run Readville-Forest Hills Route

Hyde Park is to have one line of cars, the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company having decided to continue the Readville-Forest Hills service for the present, at least.

Whether they will decide finally to discontinue this line depends upon the outcome of an inquiry into the cost of operation with one-man cars and power purchased from Edison Company. The Cleary square-Mattapan and Cleary square-Dedham lines are to be closed down as planned.

The trustees' announcement followed a day in which the Hyde Park transportation problem engaged the attention of the City Council at a special meeting, and of Mayor Peters in a conference with the trustee of the Elevated.

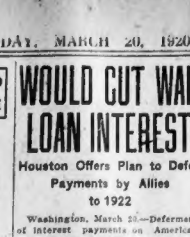
As a result of the City Council meeting, the so-called "joker" in the City Council Jitney ordinance — the $25,000-bond clause which has prevented the operation of jitneys in Boston—may be eliminated by the council next week to permit the jitney to come to the relief of Hyde Park.

Mayor Peters called upon the trustees of the Elevated with a request that they undertake to provide the section with transportation if the Eastern Massachusetts withdraws its service on April 1.

Mrs. Hickey Elected

The members of the Catholic Woman's Guild of Chelsea have elected Mrs. David J. Hickey as president of the Guild for ensuing year.

WHO'S WHO on BOSTON'S NEW POLICE FORCE



JOSEPH W. ELWORD.

Joseph W. Elword, spare man of the B Street Station, South Boston, served two years in the merchant marine on the Shipping Board's boats. He went overseas on the Burlington as fireman, during the war, and was later promoted as instructor to new men on the U. S. S. Mendi. He is a South Boston boy and formerly lived on Ellery street. Previous to entering the service he was employed as a fireman on the New Haven road, having come from Boston to East Hartford, Ct. He is twenty-five years of age, married and lives with his wife and child in South Boston.

WOULD CUT WAR LOAN INTEREST

Houston Offers Plan to Defer Payments by Allies to 1922

Washington, March 20.—Deferment of interest payments on American war loans to the Allied governments until the Spring of 1922, or three years from the date the first interest payments were due, and a change in the method of collecting the interest, which would reduce the rate from 5 to 4.76 per cent, were recommended to the House Ways and Means Committee by Secretary of the Treasury Houston. The foreign nations owe this country $8,647,000,000.

The reduced rate of interest is justified by Houston's aides said, because it represents the actual cost to the United States of raising the money which was loaned to the allies. The issues of Liberty and Victory Bonds, the committee was told, bear an average rate of interest of 4.76 per cent., which figure was increased 4.72 per cent. when the expenses of the campaign necessary to float the bonds.

WANT CONSTITUTION OF RHODE ISLAND AMENDED

Providence, March 20.—The General Assembly members want a Constitutional convention and have asked that the question: "Shall there be a convention to revise, alter or amend the Constitution of the State?" be placed before the voters on the ballot in November. Representative T. H. Wilmerton of Pawtucket told the members it was time to "wake up" and give the people an opportunity to have a voice in the government.

DEAN'S NEPHEW FEELS PLEASED

Sees Overwhelming Victory for Truth in the Election of Jaffrey Selectmen

East Jaffrey, N. H., March 20.—William Dean Goddard, nephew of Dr. William Kendrick Dean, who was murdered by German agents, wrote a letter to the Selectmen of this town congratulating them on their re-election. The letter follows:

"Pawtucket, R. I., March 16, 1920.

"Gentlemen:

"Allow me to congratulate you, not only as citizens of New Hampshire, but as officially representing the town of Jaffrey, on the overwhelming victory for truth in the recent town election.

"There is a certain piquancy in the Keene Sentinel's comment that 'there were no candidates in opposition to the Selectmen re-elected'—a rather naive acknowledgment of the nonexistence of those who would suppress the investigation of my uncle's murder.

"Like Elijah, after the storm and the earthquake and the fire, you who have battled for truth against heavy odds can now begin to hear the still small voice saying, 'Yet I have left me seven thousand in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed unto the Baal of Berlin, and every mouth which hath not kissed him.'

"Very sincerely your,

(Signed) "WILLIAM DEAN GODDARD."

Every mail brought similar letters of congratulation to the selectmen, from wealthy Summer residents and from patriotic citizens all over New England.

The Keene Sentinel, in its editorial comment, said, regarding the little circle of readers that the "soft pedal squad" had desperately tried for weeks to make an opposition ticket to the selectmen and met refusal after refusal on the part of people who did not wish to be made political targets.

The Sentinel also neglected to a state how the votes were counted and shows were asked how they were going to vote or tell of the other pernicious activities behind the scenes.

STAGE and SCREEN

By F. J. McISAAC

NEW TYPE OF PLAYGOER A PROBLEM

It is a very lamentable fact that the ability of certain working people to buy theatre tickets should be responsible for a rapidly falling off in the quality of stage attractions, but that is the fact.

Possession of money doesn't give the owner good taste and discrimination, and the presence in the orchestra of every theatre of large numbers of people who have little education, cultivation and experience as theatre-goers has a bad effect upon the stage.

These people laugh uproariously at antique jokes, are delighted at hocum and overjoyed at noise. Large numbers of girls, scantily clad blatting trombones, continuous dancing, fury and speed is what they like.

Since most producers are in business to make money they give these people what they want, particularly as it is the easiest and cheapest thing to do.

For example "Chu Chin Chow" was the work of a master craftsman. It took genius to devise its production. But the average person who is able to pay $3 for a seat much prefers an affair as Ed Wynn's Carnival, or George White's Scandals.

In Boston at the present time such artistic pieces as "Bab" and "39 East" cannot draw anything like the patronage of "The Girl in the Limousine," "Honey Girl" and "Dere Mabel," which were concocted for the new orchestra patron.

These people used to go to motion pictures and got the habit of sitting in the orchestra. They will pay $3 for the back row of the orchestra in preference to $1.65 for the front row of the balcony, a much better location. They brought their film ideas with them. They mobbed the Majestic last week and paid the high prices without question to see Theda Bara, a very bad actress in a very poor play.

Some of these $2 seat purchasers are still addicted to the Saturday night bath. Unfortunately they take the bath after they have paid the inflated Saturday night prices and sat in the Saturday night orchestra.

I don't know what is going to be done about it. You can't blame the managers for taking their money and giving them the sort of pabulum which will satisfy them. But the day is not far distant when a really artistic high class production will be as rare as kings in Germany.

And again you can't blame the managers because, apparently all the people who appreciate artistic high class productions are broke.

Role is the Doughnut.

Alison Skipworth, the boarding house mistress in "39 East," is still fulminating against the impression that actresses are lively. This week she blames the press agents.

"Exactly for ten weeks the magazine of a New York paper ran big stories of back stage scandal. How many readers of the papers would believe that these articles were mostly manufactured out of whole cloth by press agents, and frequently the artists didn't know about the scandals until they read their names in the paper."

Striken me the artists concerned ought to use their press agents for libel. But on second thought, an actor suing a press agent would be able to collect just about what a press agent suing an actor could gather in, the hole in the doughnut.

Getting to Be Habit.

John Cumberland, who plays the young man without any clothing to speak of in that hysterical farce, "The Girl in the Limousine," at the Plymouth, had an adventure one night recently which threatened to be a counterpart to his predicament in the play.

Cumberland went to spend the night with friends in the suburbs. All he carried along was a set of silk pajamas, a tooth brush, and an extra collar. When he retired for the night he asked the butler to have his trousers pressed. He thought the butler would attend to the pressing himself, this haughty person considered the office of valet beneath his dignity. Consequently he sent the trousers to a tailoring establishment a considerable distance away.

When John asked for his trousers the following morning he was told they would not be ready until 5 o'clock that afternoon. Fortunately the host had several extra pairs, but they were so small that John was able to do without a coat. Hereafter, when he goes a visiting he will wisely take with him an extra suit of clothing.

Important Interview.

Irene Olson, who figures fleetingly in the progress of the "Greenwich Village Follies" at the Shubert theatre, had an excellent reason for going on the stage. She went on because she wanted to. That was the information gleaned from a little chat with her the other day. But when urged for a real reason, she said: "You see, I thought I might as well do something, so I went on the stage." "And how did you accomplish that?" she was asked.

"Well, I just went," she explained, counting the four words on her dainty fingers.

"But did you go to see anybody or talk to anybody?"

"Oh, yes; I went to see Gertrude Hoffman, and she took me on."

"Did she ask what you had done, and whether you could dance or sing?"

No; I guess she just liked my looks and took me on. I even had to ask her how to make up for the performance."

"Were you ever interviewed before?"

"Twice in New York, but nothing was printed."

"But, my dear Miss Olsen, you must have said, something worth while. What on earth did you say?"

"Oh, nothing."

Free Character Reading.

Iwondered how long it would be before the theatrical press agent horned in upon this character, memory, will power, personality stuff that is getting the sheckles from magazine readers.

Here comes Joe di Pesa representing Louise Meyers to announce that the little actress in "Honey-Girl" is a character sharp, and if you will write to her she will give you a personal reply containing a complete analysis of your own character. Louise just looks at your handwriting, and from it tells whether you are in an asylum or should be.

Miss Meyers has consented to do this without any remuneration. If you send her any money she will be horrified.

Do Like the Hindoo.

They have so many costumes for those gorgeous mannikins in "Chu Chin Chow" that they can't show them all at one performance. Therefore a complete change of costume is announced for the scene next week.

During the past Summer the management imported 141 new costumes for the present run, thus omitting several costume editions for this scene.

The wild women of Arabia in the other big scene are not so well upholstered. Like the little Hindoo, in behalf of much of any costume they have to make their skin do.

High Class Detective Work.

The decrepit press agent of Helen Hayes, known to fame as William R. Sill, has put quite a few things over on this column, but his foot has slipped. In his lighter moments he has always run to poetry and has been accustomed to throw off verses about his stars and credit them to some helpless and defenceless individual. In my mail yesterday came the following lines:

"She has big blue sparkling eyes,
And hair like threads of gold;
She has a personality that's wondrous to behold.
Of actresses she's the queen,
To her belongs the crown,
Who is this fair-haired wonder?
Why, Helen Hayes Brown."

This is supposed to be written by the program boy at the Hollis, whose name is Basil MacDonald. Now I'm a Celt myself, and I know that nobody named MacDonald ever named their child Basil. Also, Basil said that he is only twelve years old, and I know that Manager Rich respects the law too much to hire any boy under age as a program boy, or even as Bill Sill's crutch bearer.

Furthermore, he adds that Basil sent these verses in a bunch of pansies to Helen Hayes, whose real name is Brown off the stage, and in "Bab" it is demonstrated that a growing boy who has had no money to buy flowers for a girl spends it on something for himself instead.

Thus by a process of elimination we have pinned the authorship of the verses where the crime belongs, on William R. Sill. By the way, "R" stands for Raymond, because it's Sill's favorite name in store.

Ash Can Make Whiskey.

Now that moonshine has become a respectable industry, practiced as an avocation by thrag business men, society women and the hoi polloi, Sam Ash, the tenor in "Dere Mabel," doesn't mind admitting that he was once a moonshiner himself.

It was at a tender age, however, that he helped make whiskey in a little mountain still and, unfortunately, he has forgotten the formula.

It seems that Samuel ran away from home at the age of fourteen and got kicked off a train at Rockwood, Tenn. He was kindly treated by some mountaineers he fell in with and was with them when their still was raided. Two of the whiskey manufacturers were killed, a third was wounded and Ash was captured.

The boy could sing even at that time, and when on trial at Chattanooga was made to sing in court. The judge released the boy and advised him to study singing and quit moonshining. But it was a tight squeeze whether he would be set free or sent to jail. He says he has never made any use of his precious knowledge of it to the present time. But he admits that the temptation is growing a longer every hour.

Pogany Elucidates.

Since "The Magic Melody" swept into the Majestic Theatre with its spectacular Batik costumes, people have been asking one another "What is the name of heaven is Batik?" To solve this problem for all concerned we interviewed the artist, Willy Pogany, who was responsible for the introduction of Batik to Broadway.

Mr. Pogan's definition of Batik is that it is "simply a most wonderful method of putting artistic patterns and designs in varied colorings upon material of the most delicate nature. In fact, the more delicate the material the more wonderful the color effect is. There is no other method by which the same results may be obtained.

"The method is essentially Oriental, having been worked out successfully in Batavia and Java, in the Far East. In Batik work, patterns are not mechanical repetitions, but they are in fact the actual painting of the artist on the material. No amateur could, therefore, execute Batik work. It is expensive, because it is necessarily the work of an artist of merit. It is not a lottery. It is the most exacting kind of artistic work.

KEITH'S.

The twenty-sixth anniversary of Keith's Theatre will be celebrated next week with something like a super-vaudeville bill, at the top of which is that dynamic comedienne, Eva Tanguay—the "Don't Care" girl.

Next on the bill is Bert Errell, one of the very greatest of female impersonators—the man with the Tetrazzini voice. And then comes William Gaxton and his company in that delightful comedy by Rupert Hughes, "The Junior Partner." "Billy" Gaxton is easily the Douglas Fairbanks of vaudeville. Jim and Betty Morgan will be seen and heard in songs of their own composition—a remarkable pair. Olive Briscoe and Al Rauh will present original songs and patter. Lee Rose and Kathryn Moore will do a story in song and dance, assisted by Grace Doro at the piano.

MALDEN AUDITORIUM

"Jim's Girl" is the title of the new comedy that will be presented for the first time in Malden by the Temple stock company at the Auditorium for the entire coming week. The play is the joint work of Earle Carroll, author of "Canary Cottage" and "So Long Letty" and Dave Stamper, responsible for many of the Follies' revues.

WALDRON'S CASINO

Offers as its attraction for the week starting Monday afternoon, Messrs. Drew and Campbell's New Liberty Girls, an organization whose musical farcial entertainments have for years been considered the height of extravagant fun. The company stars Jack Conway, one of the few comedians associated with burlesque that holds the legitimate ideals in their portrayal of Celtic characters and it is probably because of this Mr. Conway has retained so long the kindly approval of Irish patrons of the Merry-Merry.

Supporting the star this season are many players that have proven acceptable to burlesque audiences, among them being James J. Collins, Vic Plant, Harold Boyd, Thomas O'Brien, James Oliver, Joseph Dunn, Miss Monica Redmond, Miss Helen Stuart and Pauline Harer.

SOMERVILLE THEATRE

"Bought and Paid For" will be revived by the Somerville Players at their Davis Square Playhouse throughout the coming week. This widely-known play by Eugene Walter needs no introduction to the playgoing public, as the memory of its phenomenal success in every large city of the country still lingers. The story deals with the unlimited folk of Salemtown, their rigid ideas of discipline and narrow and bigoted conception of right and wrong. Miss Adelyn Bushnell appeared as Martha, the vivacious daughter of a stern old Quaker, Geoffrey Mayhew, who ruled his household with an iron hand.

"MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE"

Easter Week will usher in the season's greatest musical success, "Monsieur Beaucaire," at the Tremont. Following Sidney Drew's production of "Mary's Ankle" will be the attraction at this theatre for a limited engagement beginning on Monday, April 5.

FRED STONE

Beginning Easter Monday night, April 5, Fred Stone will come for a very brief engagement to the Colonial Theatre in "Jack o' Lantern."

QUARTET OF PIANISTS

A joint appearance of four of the great pianists of the day, on the same stage, in a single recital, is announced for Tuesday evening, April 6, at Symphony Hall. Leopold Godowsky, Mischa Levitzki, Leo Ornstein and George Copeland are the four—and a more varied assembly of pianistic geniuses it would be difficult to secure.

COLONIAL THEATRE

The following program will be played by the union musicians formerly members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Colonial Theatre tomorrow evening:

Emil Mollenhauer, Conductor.
Soloists.
Frederic Fradkin, Violin.
Gustav Holm, Trumpet.

PROGRAM.

CLAUSSEN RECITAL

Of extraordinary interest to Boston music lovers will be the concert recital at the Boston Opera House tomorrow afternoon of Mme. Julia Claussen, the famous Swedish singer. Mme. Claussen will be heard in an interesting and varied program, and will be assisted by the Harmony and Boston Cleo Club male chorus. As well as by the Thule of Worcester.

Her program will include: "The Star Spangled Banner," "On the Sea"—Buck, "Caro Mio Ben"—Giordini, "Des Rosen"—Pease, "Drom"—Grieg, "Mon Coeur"—Saint Saens, Gounod's "Ave Maria," McPatyre's Cradle Song and a number of Norwegian selections and Swedish folk songs. Miss Gayety Theatre. Grace Fletcher, the Dublin Doll soubrette, whose vivacity and prettiness have been popular with burlesque audiences in past seasons; Justine Gray, a petite ingenue who possesses no small amount of acting talent. This superb company is augmented by a beauty chorus of great brilliancy.

O'SULLIVAN COMING

John O'Sullivan, the Irish tenor of the Chicago Opera, will give his final concert of the season in Boston in Symphony Hall on Sunday evening, April 4. It is just a year since O'Sullivan made his concert debut in this city, and since that time he has given three concerts in Symphony Hall to ever increasing audiences. Easter Sunday night will mark his fourth appearance. He has also sung here twice with the Chicago Opera.

Assisting O'Sullivan will be Olive Russell, soprano; Ruth Stickney, violin, and Professor John O'Shea, organ and piano. The affair will be under the auspices of the League of Catholic Women.

"CENTURY MIDNIGHT GIRL"

For the first time in theatrical history, Boston will see a real New York midnight show, sent on tour in all its glory, for the celebrated Century Midnight whirl, which has been keeping New Yorkers awake at the Century Theatre for the past three years from midnight until dawn, is coming to the Shubert Theatre for a limited engagement of two weeks only, beginning Monday night, March 29. Miss Bessie McCoy Davis is the featured headliner of the Century Midnight Whirl.

MALDEN AUDITORIUM

The Temple Stock Company gave a really delightful performance of Edward Peple's exquisite comedy of the nineteenth century, "The Little Partner." The story deals with the quaint customs and habits of the old-fashioned folk of Salemtown, their rigid ideas of discipline and narrow and bigoted conception of right and wrong. Miss Adelyn Bushnell appeared as Martha, the vivacious daughter of a stern old Quaker, Geoffrey Mayhew, who ruled his household with an iron hand.

McISAAC says that

"CHU CHIN CHOU," Opera House, a resplendent and exotic fantasy of the Orient. You will enjoy it if you have poetry and imagination inside of you.

"BAB," with Helen Hayes, at the Hollis, an ingenious and diverting comedy of youth, played by a gifted little actress and fine support.

"39 EAST," a dainty and sentimental comedy of life in a New York boarding house. Constance Binney and Henry Hull. Wilbur.

"DERE MABEL," a musical comedy based upon a popular newspaper series of letters. Laughable. At the Tremont.

"THE GIRL IN THE LIMOUSINE," a farce in which men without trousers and women in pajamas run around wild. Side-splitting and rather shocking. Plymouth.

MARY YOUNG, in "The Outrageous Mrs. Palmer," a popular actress in a comedy of character, exceptionally well done. Arlington.

"GREENWICH VILLAGE FOLLIES," a different sort of revue, with such special features as Frances White and a lot of artists' models. Shubert.

"HONEY-GIRL," a dancing and slangy entertainment, dotted with girls and calculated not to make you think. Park Square.

"THE ROYAL VAGABOND," a bright operetta, with some fetching music and a lot of good people. Stamped all over with George Cohan. Colonial.

"THE MAGIC MELODY," a pretentious operetta, in which a lot of rapid specialties have been introduced. Charles Purcell and Julia Dean head the cast. Majestic.

PEARLY TEETH LANDED JOB

The possession of an excellent set of pearly teeth almost prevented Hattie Delaro, who plays the role of a globe-trotter in Marion Davies' new Cosmopolitan Production, "April Folly," which is the attraction this week at the Modern and Beacon, from appearing in the part. According to the action of the picture, Miss Delaro is supposed to lose a set of false teeth from their foundation at the psychological moment. Director Robert Leonard talked with a dentist in no avail and searched all the novelty shops in New York where a set of "trick teeth" might be found. But he discovered that all such articles were German-made and no longer procurable. The part seemed lost, when the dentist rang Mr. Leonard up and announced he had fathomed a scheme for solving the problem. Miss Delaro thinks her "second teeth" are a remarkable piece of dental ingenuity.

College Man Filmed It.

Filming scenes of college life is a task which has caused many an otherwise good director to fall down. Most of the movie attempts to reproduce realistically the youthful atmosphere of the campus are unsuccessful. "The Coat," the screen version of David Graham Phillips' celebrated novel, which is playing for this week only at the Park Theatre, is a notable exception. Director Harley Knoles, who handled the screening of this picture, is a college man. To make the college scenes he went directly to one of our largest Eastern universities and secured permission to use the campus and buildings. The result is that Mr. Knoles has filmed action with a college background that will satisfy the most exacting undergraduate.

Violet Heming plays the lead in "The Coat" and Ralph Kellard has the chief male role. Warburton Gamble, Carlotta Monterey and Edwin Mordant are also in the cast.

Bert's Chance.

How Bert Lytell, who appears next week at Scollay Square Olympia in "The Right of Way," the greatest photoplay of his career, began that career, is an interesting story, as he tells it himself.

"I began my own stage career very young—when I was just sixteen. It was over in the old Columbia Theatre in New York where I was a sort of handy-andy about the theatre, from helping to dress the leading men to holding the prompt book and weeping out.

"We were playing Men and Women at that time, and the elopement of the juvenile lead with the wife of a New York theatrical agent left a place vacant in the cast. The manager had made an eleventh hour discovery of the matter and was fairly beside himself with rage and desperation to know how he was going to fill the part. This I considered was my chance, so, going forward with a thumping heart, I put the waiter squarely up to him. I told him I was familiar with the lines through my nightly conning of the prompt book, and that I knew the way the part should be played. With the most apparent reluctance and misgivings, he finally consented for me to 'go on,' and that was my start.

LOEW'S ORPHEUM THEATRE

When a feature act at Loew's Orpheum Theatre is held over for the entire week it is always a sign that it is a record breaker and well worth a special visit to this popular theatre. Andrew Mack, the eminent artist, will offer a revue of the songs and stories that made him famous for the entire week, and he certainly smiled on Mack, for he is characterized as the world's most popular Irish actor, singer and entertainer, and lives up to his reputation. Other candid acts which will be offered the first three days of the week include Blossom Baird & Co. in a one-act comedy, "The Cat and the Solitaire"; Chic and Tiny Harvey in an amusing melange of clever comicalities; Van Cleve, the comedy singing and talking comedian; Toney George and company in a royalty act of equilibristic and contortion artistry; Sisters and Bud Bernie, who will present the ultra-modern in song and dance.

APRIL FOLLY with Marion Davies

A Paramount-Artcraft Picture

Story by CYNTHIA STOCKLEY
Scenario by ADRIAN JOHNSON

April Poole, young, pretty and clever, was one of the literary successes of the day.

Kerry Sarle was the head of the publishing house of Sarle & Co., whose magazines April's writings had helped toward fame.

April writes a story which she reads to Kerry Sarle—a story of romance and adventure which carries the reader from the dreary library of an English mansion to a costume ball in Greenwich Village and on, by ocean liner, to a dramatic moment in a hut in Cape Town, South Africa.

As the tale is spun by April, she borrows Kerry Sarle's name and character for her hero, a South African millionaire.

For the whimsical, daring adventuress of the story she coolly names herself.

There are thrilling moments of threatened tragedy, where scandal (and even death) lurks in the wake of her ship of romance.

But for the seeming folly of April in the story the April of real life is weaving a romance with quite another view.

Kerry Sarle thought her a fine little pal. He took her charms for granted. He had never noticed that real love was just around the corner.

April's method of securing the final chapter for her delightful fiction romance is the beginning of a new story for April and Kerry.

Cosmopolitan productions are selected for the screen from the writings of the world's most famous authors which appear in one or other of the great chain of Hearst magazines or newspapers.

$1,000.00 SCENARIO CONTEST

Have you ever thought out a pretty love story with a charming heroine and an attractive hero? If you have, write it into a brief scenario and try to win the $1,000 prize which the Cosmopolitan Productions offers for the best short scenario suitable for Miss Davies.

To learn the general type of scenario desired, see "April Folly" at the leading moving picture theatres, or read the story in the Hearst publications, or have it told to you. Contestants are not required to see the photoplay "April Folly" to enter this contest.

Write a clean, wholesome love story with an entertaining series of incidents and a good moral. Tell the story in a straight-forward way—no florid writing.

If the scenario is good enough to be used, Cosmopolitan Productions will pay for it, in addition to awarding the $1,000 prize. In fact, others than the prize winning scenario may be bought.

Of course, Cosmopolitan Productions has plenty of great stories, but it wants to encourage new writers and new ideas. If you have good ideas send them in. You may win the $1,000 prize and open a career for yourself as a writer.

Do not exceed 2000 words. No stories will be returned which are not accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope. This contest closes May 15th.

The judges will be Marion Davies, Cosmopolitan Production's star; William Le Baron, the distinguished playwright, and Ray Long, Editor-in-Chief of the International Magazine Company.

BEDRAGGLED BUNCH OF BRAVES WILL FACE TIGERS ON TRIP NORTH

TEAM IS FAR FROM BEING IN BEST OF SHAPE

By NICK FLATLEY.

Columbus, Ga., March 20.—The Boston Braves are on the ragged fringe of the training season here in Columbus, and it is pretty generally admitted that the stay has not been anything like the success that was argued. The weather has put the dampers on from start to finish, and most of the team's polishing up will have to be administered while the Tigers are trying to knock Boston pitchers off the peak.

Stallings' athletes work out here twice today and Monday, play the Tigers here Tuesday, and then hit the Hapgood trail through the tank towns. Only the matter of three or four days of really good weather have marked the local encampment. It has rained almost daily and when the showers held off a strong wind was ever present. And that's about the worst thing in the world for pitching arms, which were much too few anyhow.

There haven't been many days then the team didn't get out on the ball orchard, but the heroes generally just managed to get on the diamond, when the weather started working for the enemy. However, the Braves still have three hectic weeks stretching ahead before the opinion opens and in that time have plenty of opportunity to get in better trim than was the team in a year back.

Braves Better Off Than They Were a Year Ago

It must be remembered that the 1919 training season opened just a year ago today. So the Braves still have as much time in front as in that case, and all the members of the squad have managed to get sufficient exercise to make good condition the matter of a few really hot days.

The principal grouch the skipper has against things in general is that a lot of the youngsters haven't had a chance to show at their best. They naturally tore in at the start, and froze up their young arms. Chaps like Shea, Bradshaw and Morgan haven't been able to cut loose at all. Now that the games are just over the horizon they will not have a great deal of opportunity, as Stallings will be obliged to depend on regulars.

There will undoubtedly be a slash in the squad before very long as some of the contenders have showed, even the adverse conditions considered, that they haven't quite the goods to live under the big tent. Then, of course, the team is top heavy in most departments except the box, and unfortunately light there, although the addition of Jones, Miller and Scott will give the boss something to work with.

Grant Expects to Hear From Miller Soon

The bird with the commodore's name was scheduled to get here early today and start working out, while President Grant is expecting any minute now to hear from him that he has submitted terms. Realizing conditions, the president made the long journey.

Several minor league magnates are hanging in the offing to snap up disgarded youngsters and nobody will be greatly surprised if a flock of the aspirants here are released from the pictures before the long tough trail with the Tigers is hit.

We might mention a few names, but its dangerous. Poor two-year-olds often become stake horses and the same applies in a way to diamond performers.

At all events the team will stand pat with the present material for all positions. Both Stallings and Coach Dugey are convinced that infield and outfield have sufficient class to carry a good pitching staff into the thick of any race, and that the only changes will be in the box. None of the regulars will be freed, but the effort to get more fingers will go on apace, whatever that is.

SOX AND GIANTS CLASH TODAY

First of Series of 21 Games Scheduled for Fort Worth Diamond

By JACK CONWAY.

Fort Worth, Texas, March 20.—The Red Sox captured that town early today without the firing of a single gun. Apparently the garrison had a tough night at one of the local ball rooms as there wasn't even a lone sentry on duty at the railroad station where the Barrow tourists arrived.

The Sox don't like long road hikes after their siege of strenuous training at Hot Springs. So they rode in on Pullmans. While bravely eating ham and eggs in the dining car, the Barrowites took the first line of fortification. It was then a cinch to last the rest of the distance to the hotel where a flock of rooms were turned over to the invaders.

It was reported that Jawn McGraw and his athletes are entrenched somewhere in the north of this place and that they would be prepared to give battle with the Sox. The giants will fight gallantly for the honor of this town until the last dollar has been taken from the local baseball fans.

Game First of Series of Twenty-one

Today's struggle was the first of twenty-one in which the Sox and Giants are booked to engage. It is a case of getting the teams fit for strenuous pennant fights and at the same time granting it the loser currency in sight. These baseball magnates have money the way Happy Hikes to pay a war tax on his fight tickets.

The Barrow expeditionary party as it were is fairly well fit for the contest with the National Leaguers. The Sox have engaged in four games so far this week and have yet to go down in defeat.

They walloped Little Rock, while they took a couple of tussles from Pittsburgh and held the Pirates even in a third contest.

The score of the final frolic between the Sox and Pirates was 6 to 5 at the end of the eighth hole. The game was called so that the Sox might let off for the well known rattler which was waiting to carry them into this man's land.

Plenty of Pitchers for Today's Game

Barrow had plenty of pitching talent for today's game. Sam Jones, Allan Russell and Harry Harper were all ready to go out on the firing line and show the New Yorkers how the national pastime is played in the American League. Ben Karr, one of the youngsters, was also eager to perform against the Giants.

Cuddy Murphy, the former Dartmouth football and baseball star, and Harry Leaume received opportunities to show how good they were as hurlers in the final tussle with Pittsburgh. Both youngsters pitched effective ball, and would have come through with a victory if they could have hit safely. Pirate pitching with a little more regularity. Nervousness and the lack of practice was probably the cause of this fault.

FOUR HARVARD CREWS PRACTICE ON CHARLES

Four crews have found the Harvard course on the Charles navigable and it is hoped by this time next week that the three Crimson flotillas will be in action in the local basin. In the four crews was the third varsity. Edward Brown oversaw the work from the upper Union Boat House. The varsity first and seconds, with the first yearling eight rowed at Lynn, repeating the trip today. Coach Bill Haines has got his motor launch at last, and was able to follow the work-outs closely.

STATE SCHOOL MEET TODAY

Track and Field Stars Gather at East Armory; Keen Competition Anticipated

By TOM POWER.

The preliminary heats of the dashes and short distance runs, as well as the trials and finals of the field events of the third annual Massachusetts State indoor meet were held at the East Armory today. Some keen competition was furnished and good times were made by the younful athletes.

The semi-finals and the finals of the running events are to be held late today in the same building. Most of the favorites came through as expected, and the final races are expected to furnish some thrilling contests.

Several of the records of the previous meets are expected to go by the board. The 60-yard dash, Ralph Colson of East Boston, Al Dewit of English, George Clark of Hyde Park and Simmons of Commerce as the leading contestants, is expected to be a record-breaking event. Colson has been running in great style all season, with the exception of the period in which he was laid up with sickness, and is considered to be right in condition to lower the mark set up by Charles Wanaker in 1918. With the fast competition that he will have his chances are good.

Fine Field Entered in 300-Yard Run

The 300-yard run was expected to bring together one of the best fields of the season. Gene Ruggy, who broke the record at the "Regis" last week; Andy Gaffey of Medford, Captain Herlihy of Lynn Classical, Carl Lundell of Commerce, L. Bunker of Latin School, Foster of English, Willie Bell of Newton and Al Shevlin of East Boston are the ones expected to fight for a place in the final heat. Hussey came within a fifth of a second of the State meet record last week and was expected to come near it or tear setting up a new mark for the State meet.

The relay team of English High School was the favorite in the 600-yard run, although he was expected to have to better his time of last week to win from such runners as Archibald of Brookline, Blair of Medford, Clausen of Newton, Thibeau of South Boston and Joe Robbins of Lynn Classical.

Owing to the difference in the scoring system, there are to be three titles awarded rather than the usual one. Championships in each class, the Junior, Intermediate and the seniors, are to be won today. The winners last year were Commerce in the senior division, Boston English in the intermediate and East Boston in the junior division.

DAVIS TO REMAIN ALL SEASON AT WILLIAMS

Williamstown, March 20.—The Williams athletic authorities announce a piece of good news in the fact that Coach Harry Davis of the baseball nine has obtained a leave of absence from Connie Mack which will permit him to stay with the college season here. He was uncertain as to whether or not he would be allowed to remain after April 1. Ira Thomas, who relinquished his duties as coach this Spring because of business matters, plans to come to Williamstown a few times during the season, to assist Davis.

TAD'S TIDBITS

TWO MEN WHO COULD HOLD DEMPSEY.

After the Dempsey-Willard thing at Toledo, quite a bunch of fans gathered in the lobby of the Secor Hotel and talked fight. They boosted Dempsey, figured his punch, his punching ability, his speed, etc. They tried to think of heavies who might have beaten him in their day.

Jim Coffroth, who has been watching fighters since Sullivan beat Ryan, said that in his opinion the only men who would have had a chance at all against Dempsey were Jim Corbett and Jack Johnson.

"I mention these men," said Coffroth, "for their style of fighting. Corbett would have been a torment to Dempsey. I can see Corbett now as he'd feint Jack and make him miss. He could jab Dempsey, make him miss as he did with Sullivan and gradually tire him. Corbett was a master boxer. He knew the art of feinting and sidestepping. There's an awful strain on a fellow missing wild swings. It's almost as bad as being hit. I think that Corbett and Dempsey would have been a grand pair to watch.

"Johnson, of course, I consider one of the best. His defence was perfect. He was big, strong and fast. He was a big cat. My, the way that fellow could pick off punches! I don't think I ever saw him hit solidly. He would have given the champion a merry time if they ever met. Dempsey could tear in as fast as he pleased, but I don't think he'd hit Johnson except with a lucky punch. I don't say, mind you, that Corbett and Johnson could best Dempsey. I say that these two were the only men who would have had a chance. Fitzsimmons, Sharkey, Jeffries and Ruhlin couldn't stand his punching. He's a harder hitter than any of them, and they could all hit."

Here's One for the Book.

Dear Tad—

I've been reading about champion divers in your column lately, but have one who is the dude.

He-is "Duke Hawkins," of Harlem. He fought Dago Red of the old First Ward at our private club one afternoon and won in the first stanza. The fight took place in a room where a bowling alley was attached. Hawkins socked Dago Red with a right the first time he tried, and sent him skimming down the alley so fast that he scored a strike when he hit the pins.

Hawkins knocked Red into a regular berth, for he has been a pin boy ever since. Yours,

PETER POTTER,
Former Manager of Harry the Ox.

Tricks in All Trades.

Joe Welling recently toured the Middle West, meeting several crack lightweights and returned home a bit richer and much wiser.

"One fellow I fought kept stalling me. I think it was my eye all through the fight. I wondered why he kept doing it. After a while my slight was a bit blurry and the eye worried me silly. I got through the bout and gave the bird a nice lacing, but my eye still got my goat.

"One of the fight fans out there asked me if I was bothered with my eyes during the fight, and I told him that I was. It got an awful laugh out of him.

"They've been putting belladonna on the fellows' gloves out here lately," he said. "It dilates the pupil of the eye and after a while you can't find a piece of coal in a plate of ice cream. It's a great trick. Look at your opponents' gloves after this."

MANY GOLFERS AT PINEHURST

North and South Championships Bid Fair to Be Best Ever This Year

By ROBERT E. HARLOW.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 20.—Many of the leading women amateur and professional golfers of America are gathering here for the North and South championships, the leading event on the Southern schedule and next in importance to the National championship. Francis Ouimet arrived today and will play in the open amateur tournament. He should find plenty of competition in that event. Most of the professionals who have been touring the South and many others will strive for the open title.

Walter Hagen will make his first start since the Belleaire tournament, in which he shot as good golf as he ever played.

Jim Harnes will come here after the wheelville event, and Mike Brady will come up after playing a number of exhibition matches on the East Coast of Florida.

Brady's round of 65 at St. Augustine has frightened the golfers off Hagen and Harnes as probabilities favorites, and the Boston homebred will bring as much money in the pools as the open champion and the St. Louis professional.

Brady Will Sell Well in the Pools

Leo Diegel, Eddie Loos, Charley Hoffner, George McLean, Alex Ross and Jock Hutchinson will play. Tom Boyd of the Fox Hills Club got in today. He returned recently from a trip to England and Scotland and says that the favorite to win the British Championship is Abe Mitchell, but that a number of the professionals, including George Duncan, think that James Braid will come through.

Boyd got into the money at St. Augustine, although he only arrived there the day before. He says that in Florida without having had any practice since last Fall. He says that in England golf year in England and that the players there are anxious for a good representation of American amateurs and professionals in their tournaments.

Boyd thinks that on the other side that Mitchell, Duncan, Vardon and Ray would come to America, but that Braid would not. Vardon is ailing in England. The North and South women's championship will start Tuesday; the open March 29, and the amateur, April 1.

HARVARD AND YALE FENCING TEAMS MEET

Harvard and Yale fencers met in Memorial gymnasium for the dual championship. The crimson foilsmen were Captain Snow, Sam Dewar and George Howard, with J. F. Leicester, A. P. Walker and L. F. Bishop handling Yale rapiers.

Candlepin Match

"Red" Miller of Revere, holder of the world's sweepstakes candlepin record, and Jim Whelan of Cambridge are to bowl twenty strings for a purse of $500. The strings will be rolled next Tuesday and the remaining strings a week after, all at the New Boston alleys.

THE TRUMP IS COLLYER'S PICK AT HAVANA TODAY

By BERT COLLYER.

The Trump. Grapevined from the Cuban track comes the info that this maverick is the Jammy Goods of the sixth race on today's card. I know that there are a few speed merchants among the others carded to start. But the angles all seem to point to The Trump as being the one to get the candy.

Spugs looks like the logical winner of the opening dash. Fiction, on some of her best races early in the year, looks like the contender. Dorothy and Vic Munoz, however, are close up, and I should not be surprised to see either one of them the contender at the finish. Jill's recent efforts have been good enough to give her a shade in the second race. Himilruste is one that may fall from the clouds to make the winner stretch himself no matter who he be.

He probably will be one of the outsiders in the speculation, but I fancy Director James to capture the third spasm on the card. Unwise Child woke up every once in a while, and may be the one to beat. Dlomed looks all to the rosy in the fourth race. Conditions suit this bird, and with a ride he should win with plenty to spare. Hush and Little Girl look best of the remainder.

King Worth figures to have a shade on the chief field carded in sport silks in the fifth race. The old King maverick isn't as good as he used to be, but that isn't necessary with his even break. There is going to be a lot of sharp shooting in the last race, but I am not going to express any surprise if War Tax wakes up and gathers in the long end of the purse. This one has run quite good enough to come home laughing at those in the grand stand in this heat. Idtholek looks like the contender.

Harvard Club and B. A. A. Sextets in Championship Battle at Pavilion

HARVARD CLUB	B. A. A.
Bright, Lw.	r.w. Hutchinson (87's†)
Hicks, c.	c. Gerow (Enright)
Peery, r.w.	Lw., Downing (Rayerolt)
Offord, c.p.	c.p., O'Connell
Clary, p.	p., Small
Wylde, g.	g., Lacroix

The championship of the Boston Amateur Hockey League will be decided tonight at the B. A. A. Pavilion, Cambridge, when the Harvard Club and B. A. A. sextets take the ice in the last game in the playoff series. The victor tonight will win, outright, the silver loving cup presented by the Pavilion management.

It has all the earmarks of a grand, good game. Harvard Club has gone through rather a remarkable season. The crimson-garbed vets lost to Dartmouth Club early in January, since which time not a defeat has been charged against Gus Doty's crowd.

B. A. A. at the present time has its fair strength, including Irving Small and Red Stewart, and it will make the going rather fast for the Dotys. The Unicorns have been practicing hard of late and intend to rush matters from the opening bell.

STAGE TWO KAYOS IN BOUTS AT HARVARD

Battling for places in the finals of Harvard's annual Boxing Tournament, to be held Thursday, March 25, at Hastie Hall, Cambridge, the collegiate boxers staged two knockouts in the semi-final bouts at Hemenway Gymnasium.

In the 175-pound class, W. K. Clark kayoed J. F. Kelly in the second round. Ted Weatherhead, the husky 160-pound man, won on a substitute bend on the varsity eleven last Fall, and defeated T. F. Coolidge, thus clinching a place in the finals.

A. Gaglioio downed D. E. Brown for an opportunity to meet J. K. McLeod, the victor over Ted Strong, in the 145-pound class. D. Treanor, Crimson 135-pounder, will settle the question of who is to test H. D. Freedman's strength in the finals, by gaining a decision over R. B. Bentley, in a close-fought battle.

FORM FIRST AND SECOND INFIELDS AT HARVARD

First and second infields have been formed in the Harvard varsity baseball squad. The initial inner works is composed of nifty Captain Bobbie Emmons at second, with shifty Butch Conlon at short. Ned Lincoln at third, and lanky Austin Bliss at first way station. The subs are Ned Bigelow and Ralph Shaw at first and third respectively; Charlie Morris, second; and Bill Ross, short. The squad opened its out-of-town season with two bouts with Middlesex School cage, and repeats today.

WINSTON MEETS HYDE IN SQUASH TOURNAMENT

New York, March 20.—Eric S. Winston and Fillmore Van S. Hyde, both one-time National champions, are to meet in the final of the Harvard Club squash tournament. Hyde reached the title round a few days ago, while Winston advanced to the finals today by outplaying George M. Rushmore.

A SQUARE DEAL

By GILL.

Marty Killilea, who manages Johnny Wilson, had a few words to say the other day regarding Pal Reed and the latter's ability as a boxer. The latter, at the present time has been heard from, but George Carter, who will meet Reed over the rough spots until he is up near the top of the ring, comes right back at Marty.

Here is Carter's letter in full—same as Killilea's:

Some that Marty Killilea says that Pal Reed is a better boxer than Bill Mosy is pretty right, because Johnny Wilson will prove it to them in the fight that they will open between meets Reed in the ring.

Would Reed prove himself to be a first class ball player, like Wilson some instructions in the baseball game, or will need some other line of sport, besides boxing, to take on his name? Yours truly, George Carter.

THE YOUNG DIANA

Story of Tense Mystery in Which Heroine Holds Key to Youth

By Marie Corelli

What Has Gone Before

Diana is the spinster daughter of well-to-do commonplace parents. The May family resides at Rose Lea, an estate on the coast of Devon. Diana receives a letter from Sophy Lansing, including a strange advertisement. She overhears her parents discussing her age and declaring that she is in the way. She goes bathing and fails to appear for breakfast. Her clothes are found neatly folded near the water's edge.

"HOW stupid of me!" she said. "She had no cause to run away.

She looked round once again, sadly and hopelessly—then went out and closed the door softly behind her. She felt there was a something mysterious and suggestive in that empty room.

Toward dinner time Mrs. May struggled out of bed and sat up in an armchair, swathed in a voluminous dressing gown.

"I cannot go down to dinner!" she wailed to Grace. "The very idea of it is terrible! Tell Mr. May I want to speak to him."

Grace obeyed, and presently Mr. May came in obedience to the summons, wearing a curious expression of solemn shamefacedness, and as if he had done a mean trick some time and had just been found out. His wife gazed at him with red, watery eyes.

"James!" she said, quaveringly, "it's dreadful to have to remember what you said last night about poor Diana!—oh, it's dreadful!"

"What did I say?" he asked, nervously. "I—I forget——"

In the Way

"You said—oh, dear, oh, dear! I hope God may forgive you!—you said Diana was 'in the way!' You did!—Our child. Oh, James, James! Your words haunt me! You said she was 'in the way,' and now she has been taken from us! Oh, what a punishment for your wicked words! And you a Father! Oh, how shall we ever get over it!"

Mr. Polydore May sat down by his wife's chair and looked foolish. He knew he ought to say that it was indeed a dreadful thing, and that of course they could never get over it,—but all the time he was perfectly aware that the "getting over it" would be an easy matter for them both.

He had even already imagined it possible to secure a young and pretty "companion housekeeper" to assist Mrs. May in the cares of domestic management, and, when required, to wait upon James Polydore himself with all the deferential docility which should be easy to command for a suitable salary. That would be one way of "getting over it" quite pleasantly—but in reply to his wife's melancholy adjuration, he judged it wisest to be silent.

She went on, drearily:

"Fortunately, I have one black dress; it belonged to my poor sister's set of mourning for her husband, but as she married again and went to Australia within the year, it's really as good as new, and she sold it to me for a pound. And Grace can alter my bonnet; it's black, but it has a pink flower —I must get a crape poppy instead, and black gloves. And James!—and you wore white flannels this morning! I'm glad you've had the decency to change them!"

Mr. May had certainly changed them—partly out of conviction that such change was necessary, and partly because Joonson, the butler, had most urgently suggested it. And he was now tired in his "regulation" Sunday suit, which gave him the proper appearance of a respectable J.P. in mourning.

All day he had practised an air of pious resignation and reserved sadness—it was difficult to keep it up because his nature was cautious and irascible, especially when things happened that were opposed to his personal convenience and comfort. His efforts to look what he was not gave him the aspect of a Methodist minister disappointed in the silver collection.

Thousands Like Her

But perhaps on the whole, his wife was a greater humbug than he was. She was one of those curious but not uncommon characters who imagine themselves to be "full of feeling," when truly they have no feeling at all. Nobody could "gush" with more lamentable pathos than she over a calamity occurring to any of her friends or acquaintances, but no trouble had ever yet lessened her appetite, or deprived her of sleep. Her one aim in life was to seem all that was conventionally correct—to seem religious, when she was not, to seem sorry, when she was not, to see glad, when she was not, to seem kind, when she was not, to seem affectionate, when she was not. Her only real passions were avarice, tuft-hunting and gluttony—these were the fundamental chords of her nature, hidden deep behind the fat, urbane mask of flesh which presented itself as a woman to the world. There are thousands like her, who, unfortunately, represent a large section of the matronhood of Britain.

The news of Diana's sudden and sad end soon spread among the old and new friends and neighbors of the Polydore Mays, arousing languid comment here and there, such as: "Poor woman! But, after all, there wasn't much for her in life—she was quite the old maid!" Or, as at Mr. Mays' club: "Best thing that could have happened for old Polydore! he can't trot her round any more, and he'll be able to play the man-about-town more successfully!"

Nobody gave a thought to the quiet virtues of the industrious, patient, unaffected daughter who had devoted herself to the duty of caring for and attending upon her utterly selfish parents—and certainly nobody ever remembered that her spinsterhood was the result of a too lofty and faithful conception of love, or that her nature was in very truth an exceptionally pure and gracious one, and her intelligence of a much higher order than is granted to the average female.

In that particular section of human beings among whom she had lived and moved her career was considered useless because she had failed to secure a mate and settle down to bear the burden and fruit of his passions and his will. And so, as she had neither beauty nor any striking talent, or thrust herself forward in any capacity, or shown any marked characteristic, and as the world is full of women, she was merely one of the superfluous, who, not being missed, was soon forgotten.

CHAPTER V.

ON that same eminently tragic afternoon when Mr. Polydore May found it necessary to change his white flannels no soon after putting them on, and his wife had to think seriously of a crape poppy for her bonnet, two ladies sat in the charmingly arranged drawing room of a particularly charming flat in Mayfair enjoying their afternoon tea.

One was a graceful little woman, arrayed in a captivating teagown; the other, a thin, rather worn-looking creature with a pale face and bright hair tucked closely away under a not very becoming felt hat, garbed in a severely plain costume of dark navy serge. The butterfly person in the tea gown was Miss Sophy Lansing, a noted Suffragette, and the authoress of a brilliantly witty satire entitled "Cold and Hot Apple," which, it was rumored, had made even the Dean of St. Paul's laugh.

The tired-featured woman with the air of an intellectual governess out of place, was no other than the victim of the morning's disastrous "death by drowning."—Diana May. Dead in Devonshire, she was alive in London, and her friend, Sophy Lansing, was sitting beside her, clasping her hands in a flutter of delight, surprise and amusement all commingled.

"You dear!" she exclaimed. "How ever did you manage to get away? I never was so astonished! Or so pleased! When I got your note by express messenger, I could hardly believe my eyes! What time did you arrive in town?"

"About midday," replied Diana. "I felt comfortably drowned by that time—and I lunched at the Ritz——"

"Drowned!" cried Sophy. "My dear, what do you mean?"

The Court of the Wise Man

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1920, by International Feature Service, Inc.

IN the Court of the ancient Wise Man gather pilgrim-girls from the edges and ends of the earth. Women were the worshippers at the altars of Aphrodite—they brought their doves and flowers—coming across the hills of the world when their spinning and baking were done—their Greek gowns waving in the soft air, their sandaled and bare feet rosy in the grass—with sober faces and sweet—for women take Love seriously. And they still seek out the son of Venus—for they adore Love himself—and not a man!

And in his quiet court—where he sits pink and solitary, with the gilt of his wings and hair glittering in the sun, and blinding the beginners—they come, and listen, and try to learn. How many women have looked on the face of Love and watched its lips and the swift play of feeling on his tiny old face, drunk in his teachings, walked with him, worked with him, played with him—and do not know what he taught at all!

And there are some folks, too, who know him from the top of his last waving gilt curl to the print of his rose-petal soles, body and bones, and spirit and heart, his laws, his rewards, his philosophy, his revenges, his eternal gayety, his everlasting grief—and they never will see him at all; well, poets—and advisers! You see? —NELL BRINKLEY.

THEY said little on the way back, and Leon walke dinto the lobby of the Grand looking a bit disconsolate; he was startled by a cry, and turning saw his mother's arms outstretched, sweeping down upon him oblivious of amazed glances.

Hancock stood by smiling. Mrs. Kantor, with her arms about her boy's neck, was half crying and half laughing. Leon himself felt as though he had been transported to New York without his knowing it.

Nothing but a Surprise

"Mama, how did you get here?"

"Oh, I made it up to surprise you."

"Nothing wrong at home?"

"Nothing, Papa and the children are fine—"

"And you came all alone?"

"Why not—after travelling all over with you, an American like me."

He led her to the lounge and watched her with a wave of tenderness as she dabbed a handkerchief at her eyes; in spite of her assurances he was alive to the effort it must have cost her to start on the trip alone.

"You've been lonesome for me, Leon," she asked, appealingly.

He nodded. "Yes, many's the time I've wanted you."

She patted his cheek. "That's the way with me, Leon, dear—I read all about the Kings and Queens, but I knew you were thinking of me."

Mama Kantor was not interested in Rome. "It ain't fit to be compared with New York," she announced, as they stood looking over the city. "You better come back, Leon. Izzy ain't going to be married till you do."

Hancock evaporated into the background. New York spelled money and he was not fond of lolling. Leon never even thought of asking if his manager had anything to do with his mother's arrival.

Mrs. Kantor did not mention Gina. She waited for Leon and sensed the young man's thoughts before he put them into words.

"Oh, you remember I wrote about meeting Minnie Ginsberg—Gina Berg."

Mrs. Kantor nodded.

"In Rome?" said Mrs. Kantor.

"Only for a week more—she's seeing the sights—a very nice girl, Mama—you remember her?"

"Your father remembers. Sol Ginsberg sold him brasses. Mr. Berg he is now—very rich—a big man, Leon—we don't see him no more."

"Very rich?" echoed Leon. "I didn't know that."

"That's because you never thought about the change in the name. Oh, yes, he's a millionaire, Sol is."

"Gina's very simple in her tastes," said Leon. "She lives in a pension and not at a hotel. Why does she do that if her father's so rich?"

Mrs. Kantor had no answer; it was a strange trait not to be accounted for by precedent.

"You must have dinner with her," Leon went on, "she is going back soon and she'll be glad to see you."

His mother glanced nervously at him, uncertain whether to ask the question she was impatient to ask or to wait further developments. She decided to wait and Leon included her in the party he had already arranged for the evening.

Mrs. Kantor seemed out of place in the, big dining room filled with fashionables from all parts of the world.

But there was nothing but pride in the young man's eyes when he brought Gina to her side. The younger woman had the manner that is born in the heart. Mama Kantor had not expected to see a vision of such loveliness. She was impressed and flattered, too. She had seen thousands of girls in her journeys with Leon, but never one more beautiful than this daughter of Sol Ginsberg, their one-time neighbor in the Ghetto.

Mamma Kantor knew enough of her son to see that Hancock was right. Inwardly she was alarmed, somehow the thought of losing this boy of her heart assumed a sudden and terrible reality. She talked about their trips together and smiled as she related with homely appreciation the triumphs of his childhood.

Gina Berg showed her interest, and the anecdotal evening passed on wings.

"Who would have thought of her growing up like that?" said Mrs. Kantor, "so beautiful—such a homely little girl, here, too."

"No, she won't; she's for art, not marriage."

"His reply gave a good deal of information; Mrs. Kantor approved Gina's stand, but she did not say so.

"It's the American way, Leon—it should be everything first and then they get married."

She pretended a great interest in the sights of Rome, and Leon piloted her about with an air of assumed happiness. But Mrs. Kantor need have had no fear. In her pension room Gina fought out with herself the question she imagined would make or mar her career, and with tears, sacrificed her feelings to her ambition. In the briefest but most cordial of notes she told Leon of her sudden departure for Vienna and sent her love to his mother.

Mrs. Kantor found him standing with the note in his hand. A look of misery in his eyes. With the intuition of the psychologist she resented that this was the time to talk about America.

They Start for Home

Hancock backed her up; Leon listened apathetically and nodded. He felt at the moment that it didn't much matter. Hancock acted with all the speed of business and the three were staring at the receding chalk cliffs of England on the third day thereafter.

There was a notable company on board, and Hancock made hoit to arrange a concert at which Leon was to play for the benefit of a new paiyiid in the steerage.

It was a great success; men and women who had paid little attention to the young man looked on him with the appreciation of the unsinkable.

The new arrival received a purse numbering several hundred dollars. American money, more than his family had saved in five years. Out of gratitude they named the child after the violinist. Mamma Kantor, who was present at the ceremony, recalled with a vividness all too real her own voyage to the land of promise and tears filled her sympathetic eyes.

The magic fingers of Leon had lifted the Kantor family out of the rut, and this baby born in midsea —who could tell? The world was before him. The current of the ship's talk centred for the moment on this child of fortune switched to other things.

When they reached New York and Abraham with Izzy and Esther and the fiancee of Izzy met them they forgot the news of nations in the joy of home happenings. Abrahm showed his affection by a continual patting of Leon's hand and frequent inquiries as to his health.

A Season of Triumphs

It was a Winter of new triumphs and new plaudits. Leon's playing had taken on a deeper significance. His interpretations showed a more masterly insight. After all, it needed the touch of Europe to round out the genius of the New World. Mamma Kantor read the praise of the critics and drew her own conclusions. Papa Kantor was satisfied with the increased sums that poured into the family coffers.

Hancock partly as advertisement, partly as good business had the finest of his virtuoso insured for a king's ransom. It added to the glamor that surrounded this young man who affected no mannerisms and seemed like the rest of the world till he took up his violin and drew the bow across its strings.

He noted now and again in the financial columns the name of S. S. Berg, but he did not hear again from Gina, who was plodding away in Austria, trying to mount the first step of the ladder on whose top rung he already stood.

"It's a good thing you sent for me," Mamma Kantor said to Hancock. "Leon plays better since he's back."

"It's a good thing you came!" He eyed her appreciatively. "Is she—Miss Berg still in Vienna?"

"She's going to stay two whole years," said Leon's mother.

"The longer the better," answered the manager. "After all, work keeps even artists out of trouble."

No Trouble

Certainly there was no trouble in keeping Leon busy; if he played better than he had ever played before he also played offener and the Winter passed to the satisfaction of the manager and the completer satisfaction of the Kantor family.

Izzy's marriage came, to break the monotony of concerts. It was an event in which Leon took a particular interest; perhaps he was thinking of his own possibilities. At any rate he made the young couple a handsome present, and wished them godspeed with tears in his eyes.

The bride was inclined to regard him as sentimental, excusing his frailty with the time-worn phrase of artistic temperament, But Mama Kantor sensed the situation with more perspicacity.

The Two Voices

CHAPTER XLI.

IN less than a week an upright piano had been brought to Daniel Rodney's house and installed in the library in the space between the fireplace and the window. Hugh's couch was drawn out in front of the hearth, and he was in the habit of lying here hour after hour while Laura or Ruth read to him.

The piano arrived one morning, and, when Ruth entered the library that afternoon, she heard the thrill of excitement in the invalid's voice even before she saw the cause of it.

"Oh, Doris, darling—I am so glad you've come—" he greeted her. "You are later than usual today—aren't you?"

"I don't think so," she said. "Why were you in such a hurry for me?"

"Look!" he commanded.

He pointed across the room, but not to the piano, for his blindness made it impossible for him to indicate the exact location of the instrument. Doris did not tell him this.

"Oh, the piano's here!" she exclaimed, trying to throw the correct amount of enthusiasm into her voice. "Your father did not let the grass grow under his feet, did he?"

"Indeed he did not! Ever since he spoke of it I have felt as if I could not wait to hear you play and sing, Doris. Just as soon as you get your coat and hat off, and are rested a bit, you will give me some music, won't you? But, first of all, kiss me. You forgot to do that."

"You forgot it yourself in your excitement over the piano," she retorted jestingly.

Then she received his usual kiss and turned away to take off her wraps.

"I will step over into Laura's room with these things," she said.

She knew that Laura was out, and she wanted to be alone for a minute. Already her hands were trembling with nervousness at the thought of playing or singing for Hugh Rodney. She had always had the shrinking—peculiar to certain people—from "performing" in the presence of a stranger. Especially she dreaded having Hugh hear her do so. As Ruth Courtney, she knew she could not stand the ordeal. As Doris Courtney, she must stand it.

She Has to Sing

She had almost hoped that Mr. Rodney would defer getting the piano. While she had accused herself of selfishness in this hope, she could not help entertaining it.

Now she must do more than "face the music." She must make it herself.

It was but one more ordeal through which she had to pass. If she were worthy Ruth's friendship, she would meet this new situation.

"What are you going to sing?" Hugh asked when she had returned to him, and closed the door of the library. She was glad Laura was out!

"I would rather play something first," she said, "until I get my breath from walking so rapidly."

"All right. Play what you like, won't you?"

Her heart beat with the sickening rapidity familiar to the nervous musician. Ever since her childhood, her seemingly unconquerable stage-fright had been the reproach of her mother and the rewret of her music teacher. Now she had come to the point where she must master it. She had never been able to do so before. Could she now!

"What a sweet tone this instrument has- She commented to gain time.

"Yes, it has. Please play something Doris," the blind man urged.

The name he called her by acted as a spur.

Would Be Easier

He would be listening to her as Doris, not as Ruth. That made it easier. She knew she could play and sing better than Doris could—when only her own family were at hand to listen. Doris herself had said that.

Very softly she began to play Ordin's "Souvenir." It was a piece she loved. She had heard Mischa Elman play it last year, and had never forgotten the joy of the experience. She had been delighted to find that she could secure an arrangement of the piece for the piano.

As the last note died away into silence Hugh spoke, his voice trembling with emotion.

"Doris, darling! That was just what I was longing to hear! And you played it because you and I heard it together just after we were engaged, didn't you? You remember that wonderful evening, when we heard Mischa Elman, and—"

He stopped abruptly as Ruth's hands crossed with a clashing discord upon the keys.

"I beg your pardon!" she exclaimed. "That was an awkward thing to do. In getting up from the stool I slipped and caught at the piano to steady myself."

"You did not hurt yourself?" anxiously.

"Don't stop playing," he hogged, as she came across the room toward him. "While I listened to that 'Souvenir' I felt as if you and I, Doris, were alone together in all the world—just as I felt when you and I heard it last year.

"And, darling, I know that you were remembering, too—or you would not have played it. And I know that you were living over again that unforgettable evening. "Yes, Hugh; I played it because I heard it that evening last year—and loved it," she muttered.

What's In a Name?

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Copyright, 1920, The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

SYLVIA

PERHAPS the most poetic of all feminine names is Sylvia. Its origin dates back to mythological times when there was a deity called Sylvanus, a name derived from Sylvia, meaning wood or forest.

Sylvanus was the protector of husbandmen and their crops. He was generally portrayed as an old man with a cypress tree in his hand. Just before the Christian era, Sylvanus became a Roman proper name and indirectly from it is derived the masculine Silvius, through the old legend of the son of Aeneas and Lavinia, born in a wood, and hence called Aeneas Silvius.

Silvius was the name given to a member of the Piccolomini family, who afterward became the Pope. Sylvius and Sylvia became the favorite applied to shepherds and shepherdesses, Sylvia's translation being "living in the wood."

Certainly it has been loved to write odes and sonnets and roundelays to Sylvias whose simple virtues and rustic beauty they exalted in lyrical extravagance. Indeed Sylvia became the class name for rustic maidens, just as "Jane" has been slightly adopted as a synonym for any woman today. The best known of the poems to Sylvia is the charming lyric, "Who is Sylvia?" of Shakespeare in his "Two Gentlemen of Verona:"

"Who is Sylvia? What is she,
That all the swains adore her?
Holy, fair, and wise is she:
The heavens such grace did lend her
That she might adored be.

Is she the kind, or is she fair?
For beauty lives with kindness.
Love does to her eyes repair,
To help him of his blindness—
And being he'ped, inhabits there."

Sylvia, simplest of rustic names, has for her talismanic stone the simplest of gems, the turquoise. Set in gold, it will protect its wearer either riding or walking, so the legend goes. It is the Persians' national stone, and they believe that to see the new moon reflected in the blue, gleaming surface is sign of good fortune. Holly is Sylvia's flower, Saturday her lucky day and two her talismanic number.

FOREIGN TRADE OF THIS COUNTRY DECREASING

The latest statistics from Washington indicate that the foreign trade of the United States is decreasing. This is partly due to the fact that those which force foreigners who buy in this country to pay largely increased prices. Exports in February this year totalled but $646,000,000, the smallest amount aggregate since October last. The decrease compared with January was $76,000,000.

February imports amounted to $467,000,000 against $476,000,000 for January. The balance of trade is still greatly in favor of this country.

BIGHEART LED THE MARKET

Price Range Narrow on Boston Exchange; Dull Day on the Curb

The majority of issues traded in on the Boston Stock Exchange advanced and the list was strong on the whole, although there were weak spots and gains were not the rule at the close. There was a trend of the morning, but later in the morning the market here reflected New York strength. Bighearts advanced to a higher sterling rate, it selling at its top price for 1920, steady money, and the same influences which have been operating for a rise for a week or more. The movement in the stock of the Treasury Houston that he knew of no pending gold imports was a little disturbing and Washington figures showing a decrease in exports also gave bears excuse to attempt raids. The New York market awakened somewhat in the afternoon but there was not much change in the final situation. None at all as regards money. The home market was active, transactions totalling about 35,000 shares.

BIGHEART A FEATURE.

Bigheart was the big feature morning, midday and afternoon, having a turnover of nearly 14,000 shares. It was strong also, selling at its year's highest. Ventura was another stock to make its 1920 high. Smoking sold at a new high record price on the first transaction. Aside from Bigheart Ventura to show its largest sale totals were American Oil & Engineering which was weak, and Caron Hill with a small turnover, which were strong. More attention was given coppers than for some time, but interest in this class was confined to the morning. This was the case in New York, too. But few if any stocks everything advanced there.

FLUCTUATIONS NOT WIDE.

The market was broad in a general sense, but not as regards price movement. While about a score of stocks ranged a point or more up or down, changes in valuation averaged small. St. Mary's Land advanced three points and United Drug common two on solitary sales. Gains by Osceola and Quincy were made on single transactions. Among other strong stocks were U. S. Smelting and International Products.

Stocks to decline a point or two were Boston Elevated, Island Creek, Island Coal, Ahmeek, American Woolen preferred, Gray & Davis, Nickson Investment, Swift & Co, and New England Telephone.

CURB MARKET WAS DULL.

It was a dull session on the Curb, sales totalling only 225 shares, with transactions in Manhattan alone amounting to 1,050. Most of the trading was in silvers. High prices oils were neglected. No sale of Gilliland Oil or Simms Petroleum was recorded. The only active issues besides Manhattan were Arizona Extension, Silver Reef, Eureka, Black Hawk, Mutual Trust and Universal Silver.

Among the declines were Manhattan ⅛, Black Hawk 1 cent, Mutual Trust 7 cents, Universal Silver 2 cents, Hecla Divide 1 cent and Pick 1 cent. Arizona Silver 1-16, U. S. Steamship ⅛, Gadsden ⅛ and Atlas Tack ⅛.

The time for exchanging certificates for old Universal Rivers has been extended to March 27 at the Boston office of the National Security Co., trustee. Reed will exchange basis one share of Reed will exchange three shares of Universal; one share of Consolidated will exchange two shares Universal; one share Arizona Extension will exchange three shares Rex. High Prices in Japan

In the current New England letter, the First National Bank of Boston says the outstanding features in Japan are record prices for cotton and high prices of commodities. General conditions resemble those in the United States, including frequent strikes and labor unrest. Silk, quoted at 1,260 yen per package of 1,333 pounds a year ago, is now 4,000 yen per package.

Cotton Market Steady

New York, March 20.—Spot cotton was steady and unchanged yesterday at 41c. No Sales.

STERLING RISES TO 3.83 MARK

Call Funds in Abundant Supply and Time Money is Easier to Obtain

By BROADAN WALL.
(Registered U. S. Patent Office.)

New York, March 20.—In spite of profit taking at the close yesterday stocks were higher in nearly every department after a session of great activity. The rise in security values followed over the gold reported coming from London. The fact that gold really is coming was confirmed by the action of the sterling exchange market which rose to a new high level of 3.82. Time money was easier to get and renewals were at 7 per cent. with call funds in abundant supply at that price.

Nothing of stock market importance developed in the news of the day. The market seems to be based on the fact that the government, Federal Reserve and the Executive Department at Washington are giving American business a breathing spell.

The market was strong at the close with insistent buying from many quarters.

Republic Steel, Royal Dutch, Stutz Motor, Vanadium and U. S. Steel attracted most attention. All touched high records. Many others were equally active, but these were particularly watched because of developments expected in them.

Republic stock is said to have been sold short to the extent of 20,000 shares more than the floating supply. Royal Dutch is expected to give rights in the near future on another issue of stock. Stutz Motor advanced 10 points. U. S. Steel is being bought by the best people in the banking world. They believe that the corporation will in the not distant future make a distribution of Liberty bonds from its treasury. Chicago Pneumatic Tool shows a remarkable increase in corporation strength.

GIVES MACHINE GUNS A WIDER RANGE

It is claimed for the Lawrence machine gun mount, which has been ordered for the United States Navy and the United States Marine Corps, that it allows firing over nearly as wide a range as if aimed from the shoulder and that it can be raised, lowered, deflected or aimed vertically for aircraft firing. Its users believe that it has a practically unlimited market and that the United States Army alone will need 50,000 of these mounts.

It is manufactured by the United States Manufacturing Company of Springfield, Mass., which is capitalized at $250,000 and whose stock, par value $100, is held by the Lincoln Investment Company. The offices of the latter are in the Little Building at No. 89 Boylston street.

Chief Market for Rubber

This country is the chief market for rubber, the United States consuming nearly about two-thirds of the world's supply. American consumption was 359,000 tons in 1918 and amounted last year, according to estimates, to about 400,000 tons. The expansion of automobile manufacturing largely accounts for the increase.

U. S. Using More Cotton

This country is consuming more cotton this year than it did last. Domestic consumption during the current fiscal year from the first of July to the end of February indicates that nearly 7,000,000 bales will be used during the twelve months ending with June next. Consumption for the corresponding preceding period was 5,765,756 bales.

Brass and Copper Imports

Recent imports of scrap brass and copper have been very large, being stimulated by low foreign exchange rates and European eagerness to obtain American dollars. Offerings of such metal is one of the reasons given for weakness of copper. American consumers have been buying for them imports in lots of million of pounds.

Living Cost Going Down

According to Washington reports the cost of living is going down. The Labor Department reports that there was a 6 per cent less in February than this year than in the preceding month, and 12 per cent less than it has received from retail dealers in foodstuffs in fifty-one cities.

MEASURES THAT WOULD CURE MOST OF THE TROUBLES AND TENDENCIES WHICH DISTRESS AND ALARM US TODAY

(1) To nominate for the Presidency by direct nomination and to elect by popular vote.
(2) To elect the Cabinet officers and make them responsible to Congress.
(3) To deprive the President of the power of patronage; to put all public offices as nearly as possible under Civil Service, and have appointments mde by a committee of Congress.

(5) To apply the Initiative, the Referendum nd the Recall to national matters.

Both Tenant and Landlord Must Be Protected

The shortage of suitable dwelling houses in the cities and towns of Massachusetts has reached such an acutely serious stage that something should be done immediately to relieve the situation.

Mere talking about it will get us nowhere. What is needed is action, action intelligently directed, action which will remedy the cause.

Everybody knows that there is a serious shortage in suitable dwelling houses and that lack of building during the war is the chief cause.

And everybody also knows, or ought to know, that to this shortage of houses is added the artificial shortage brought about by rapacious landlords who, by profiteering in rents, prey upon helpless tenants.

And not only the poor are the victims of rent profiteers. The great middle class is hit harder by this shortage of houses than any other. The middle-salaried man, the small business man—they are the victims of an unjust, because immoral, orgy of speculation now rampant in real estate.

To correct the evils and injustices which have grown out of this situation, Representative Martin Hays of Brighton has introduced a bill in the Legislature designed to give both landlord and tenant a square deal.

The heart of the bill allows the landlord ten per cent. net profit on an honest investment, at the same time assuring the tenant protection against unfair rentals. Other provisions take care of the practical enforcement of the measure which is to lie with the courts, thus removing the enforcement of the hoped-for law from political influences.

There is no question as to the need of such legislation. The Commission on the Necessaries of Life, which muddled through the rent situation, goes out of existence the last day of this month. Some practical agency for the tenants' protection must be provided. The Hays bill makes such provisions. Furthermore, it is based on the square deal.

Now, no bill however just or efficient can become law unless the public shows the Legislature there is a pressing demand for its enactment.

And there can be no pressing demand shown unless the public has some definite agency through which it can work.

Believing that thousands of tenants in this city and State are eager for such remedial legislation, that hundreds of reputable real estate dealers would welcome any law which would make it impossible for unscrupulous dealers to debase the real estate game, the American has organized the Boston American's Tenants League to get behind the Hays bill and assure its passage.

The American has no axe to grind in furthering this bill. It is actuated only by motives of public service.

If you tenants who want fair rentals granted you—if you real estate men wish to save your business from the odium unscrupulous dealers are now heaping upon it—here is your chance.

Join the Boston American's Tenants League! Get behind the Hays fair rent bill and help to bring about the square deal for the landlord and the tenant in Massachusetts.

Big Difference Which Part of Ireland Does It

A clergyman preaching last week in the city of Brockton attacked the Irish liberty movement. He happens to be an Englishman born and is still a British subject. So it is not extraordinary that he should attack the Boston American for its sympathy for Ireland's desire to be free.

But it is extraordinary that he should at this late day attack the Irish for having attempted to introduce into Ireland some German rifles. Has he forgotten that his Ulster friends under the leadership of the blatant Carson introduced the German rifles into Ireland and organized and drilled Ulstermen for the purpose of bloody rebellion in case the home rule bill, then approved by the British government, passed Parliament?

In all of human records there is nothing so awful as the distinction which was made between Carson and his followers and the real Irish for the same acts. Carson's treason was rewarded by the achievement of the object of the treason, the withdrawal of the home rule bill, and Carson himself was elevated to a place in the British Cabinet. But the Irish who followed Carson's treasonable example, believing that it could not be treason, since it was rewarded, were received with machine guns and bombs, and their leaders, men of culture and character, were shot without mercy and without trial.

This hideous discrimination did more than anything else in the world to make American public opinion approve the Irish demand for an absolute separation from a government that could be relatively so brutal to the Irish people.

Judges Are Entitled to an Increase in Salary

The judges of Massachusetts are as much affected by the high cost of living as any other body of men, and if their base salary was fair it ought to be adjusted according to the increase in the cost of living. Their request for an increase of wages is not immodest if the increase in the prices of necessaries is considered. We know that the cost of living has gone up about 110 per cent. in America. The judges ask for less than 50 per cent. increase.

Those who think little of the capacity of some of our judges ought not to permit that to weigh against their approval of the proposed increase in wages. That the State Supreme Court has become less progressive in the last few years is not a reason to resist giving them a fair compensation according to the standards to which we should like to have them live.

The way to correct bad judicial decisions is not to be unjust in compensation. The laborer is worthy of his hire in the case of a judge as in the case of any other workman, and the way to get judges who will not interfere with the development of democracy and of social and economic justice is not by being unjust. In Massachusetts especially this is true, because we have the Initiative and the Referendum and can now in almost every instance correct a mistaken decision.

There are few who have challenged the personal integrity of our judges in private litigation, and it is in this field that almost all their labors are spent.

We think they ought to be granted their increase in salary fully.

The Daylight Saving Bill Should Be Passed

Daylight saving was adopted by this nation as a means of winning the war. The experience of the associated governments was before us. It was not a leap into the dark.

Production of the essential implements of combat had been stimulated not merely because the workman in shop and factory was given an additional hour in the natural light to perform his very necessary work, but also because the morale of the entire country was improved by this innovation, which made so large a contribution to the opportunity for healthful recreation and respite from the serious work, while not at all retarding production.

The confessions recently made by the representatives of the associated powers of their very serious plight when we ventured into the war—that they had actually approached the point of suing for peace terms—of course emphasize the imperative need which then existed for American production to save us all from the possibility of defeat. The United States performed this task when the clocks were set ahead one hour, when we had daylight saving.

Some of the foreign nations, with wisdom based on their experience, have maintained daylight saving for their permanent advantage. Here, unfortunately, Congress yielded to what seems to have been a very small minority, though well-organized, and discarded the benefits we enjoyed.

States, cities and towns have of their own accord established daylight saving, determined not to suffer from the evident mistake which Congress has made. Massachusetts can very well do what they have done.

On what seems to have been a satisfactory test vote, the House has advanced the daylight saving bill to a third reading. The reasons which actuated this decision still exist. It is expected that the legislators will hew to the line. The statements made by the opponents of the case are not more potent today than they were yesterday.

Organizations representing 750,000 people in the State have been recorded in favor of daylight saving. The opposition came solely from one class, which in numbers is very small in comparison. Some doubt has been expressed as to whether the spokesmen for this class have always represented the sentiment of the farmers as a whole or whether they were at times inclined to give voice to the personal views of the comparatively small number who constitute their central organization.

Industrial accidents were reduced 30 per cent. in Pennsylvania during the period of daylight saving. There were 43,000 fewer industrial accidents. Our own Industrial Accident Commission is authority for the statement that a large percentage of our accidents occur during the dim light of the late afternoon.

Fuel economy, development of home gardens, opportunity for necessary recreation, relief of eyestrain and the general aids to health are among the benefits which accrue to us. Against all this, the statements of opposition seem negligible.

By K. C. B.

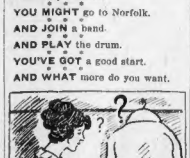
Dear K. C. B.—People tell you lots of things they wouldn't tell their folks, and I need consolation.

I had a brand-new overcoat, the overcoat of a gunner in Uncle Sam's navy, and I hung it on a nail in a restaurant. When I got ready to leave I found in its place a shabby, old blue coat, and in searching the pockets for a clue of its owner I found only a permit to carry a bass drum on the street cars of Norfolk, Va.

Why, oh, why!

GEORGE O.
Chicago, Ill.

MY DEAR George.
WHEN I read your letter.
I WAS reminded.
OF A lot of trouble.
THAT I once had.
WHEN I worked in St. Paul.
AND HAD just been married.
AND IT was Spring.
AND ONE midnight.
IN THE newspaper office.
I LOANED my coat.
TO ANOTHER reporter.
WHO HAD to go out.
TO "COVER" a murder.
AND HE brought it back.
AND THE next afternoon.
I CARRIED it home.
AND WARM weather came.
AND THE coat was hung up.
AND THEN put away.
WHERE IT could remain.
TILL THE next Fall came.
AND WHEN it came.
MY NEW young wife.
TOOK OUT the coat.
AND AIRED it well.
AND BRUSHED it well.
AND WENT through the pockets.
AND FOUND therein
A LOVING letter.
THAT BEGAN "Dear Honey."
AND GUSHED its way.
FOR THREE or four pages.
AND SIGNED itself.
"WITH A million kisses.
"AND LOTS of love."
AND THE envelope.
THAT THE letter came in.
HAD DISAPPEARED.
AND WHEN I got home.
ALL MY wife did.
WAS TO hand me the letter.
AND CRY a little.
AND ALL I could say.
WAS IT wasn't mine.
AND IT took me a day.
TO RECALL the fact.
THAT I'D loaned the coat.
AND I told her of that.
AND THOUGH it was true.
IT SOUNDED foolish.
I GOT red in the face.
AND SHE didn't believe me.
AND OUR household was sad.
FOR THREE or four days.
AND I ask you, George.
IF THE trouble I had.
WASN'T VERY much worse.
THAN THE loss of a coat.
AND IN your case.
YOU MIGHT go to Norfolk.
AND JOIN a band.
AND PLAY the drum.
YOU'VE GOT a good start.
AND WHAT more do you want.



I THANK you.

Partition Plan for Ireland Serfdom, Prelates Say

THE Boston Sunday Advertiser has received from Ireland and will publish tomorrow a symposium of opinion of distinguished prelates on the Irish situation as it exists today. Those contributing are Cardinal Logue; the Most Rev. Dr. O'Donnell, Bishop of Raphbe; the Most Rev. William J. Walsh, Archbishop of Dublin; the Most Rev. Dr. Gilmartin, Archbishop of Tuam; the Most Rev. Dr. O'Doherty, Bishop of Clomfert, and the Most Rev. Dr. McHugh, Bishop of Derry.

These churchmen, holding that their position in religion does not force them to relinquish their rights as citizens, unite in protesting against the partition proposal advanced by Premier Lloyd George for Ireland. "We will never submit to becoming serfs," declares Dr. McHugh. "It is vain devising settlements which settle nothing," says Cardinal Logue.

"Ireland will survive her trials and eventually rule herself," in the opinion of Dr. O'Donnell. Dr. Gilmartin insists upon the right of a people to seek a change in their government if they do so in an orderly fashion.

"We are pilloried for asserting the rights of a small nation," Dr. O'Doherty maintains.

Why are some industrial plants leaving Boston for other cities?

The Boston Advertiser has looked into the cause of Boston's slowing down in industrial development, as indicated by the recent Federal census. It has inquired from leaders in business and commerce what should be done to replace any losses that may have been suffered and what is needed to maintain the city as a leader in national life.

Tomorrow these opinions will be printed. They were written by:

William L. Fairbanks, director of the Massachusetts Commission on Foreign and Domestic Commerce and secretary of the General New England Commission;

W. Irving Bullard, vice-president of the Merchants' National Bank and manager of its industrial department;

Charles A. Andrews, president of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts;

Dr. Edward M. Hartwell of the city of Boston statistical department.

Williams Jennings Bryan finds many bad features in the law returning the railroads to private ownership. "The railroads ruled Congress and obtained the law they wanted," he declares.

Mr. Bryan criticises the subordination of the power of the States. He sees objections to the labor provisions of the law and assails its indefinite language. The good features of the bill, he asserts, are due to the lessons learned from government ownership.

"England, at Paris, tried to make a catspaw of America," writes Maximilian Harden, the brilliant German editor. "She sought to put the burden of a settlement regarding Constantinople upon the United States.

"The imperialism of Greater Britain has realized its final goal in Africa. Asia and Asia Minor. America, disillusionized and disgusted, has turned her back on Europe. England's triumph means a vast peril to the Continent."

The big three—Wilson, Clemenceau and Lloyd George—are to blame for the present chaos in Europe, and only the sane action of the United States in refusing to underwrite this chaos prevented a cataclysm, says Austin Harrison, eminent English editor and publicist, in explaining the failure of the peace treaty. The reason for England's attitude toward Russia is also an interesting part of his enlightening article.

Captain Claude R. Collins, the Philadelphia airman who volunteered to take the trip from Worcester to Mars in Professor Goddard's rocket, says he is still ready to make the trip when all the problems have been worked out. He intimates he might not want to come back if he got there, which, he says, seems more feasible as he learns more of what the scientists have discovered.

"Spiritualists are false prophets," says Marie Corelli, the famous British novelist. "The promoters of spiritualism are not in a normal state of mental balance. Those who have passed into the next life have no desire to communicate with this little ball of dust called earth."

New England cities, by co-operating with the farmers in solving rural problems, can reduce living costs and restore New England as a powerful factor in the agricultural prosperity of the country, according to Leslie R. Smith, master of the Massachusetts Grange. Better roads, better school teachers and more labor are some of the things he specifies that the cities should help to provide.

Letters to the Editor

Soldiers' Bonus

Editor Boston American:

The Newton Post, American Legion, claims that it is opposed to any bonus from the government. Would the members of Newton Post accept a bonus if the government granted one? Didn't the members of the Newton Post rush in their applications for the Massachusetts $100 bonus? Did all the veterans of all the States get a bonus? Did the members of Newton Post give their Massachusetts bonus to the veterans who were in need of financial assistance in other States where no State bonus was given?

If the members of Newton Post are serious about not accepting any assistance from the government, why doesn't the entire membership donate the whole of its State bonus to some charitable institution? I was almost two years in the service and was at the front seven months, and financial aid from the government would be appreciated.

Believes in Wood

Editor Boston American:

Your editorial on March 12 on General Pershing was O. K. if you had only finished when you were through with him, but I think when you made the unfair contrast with General Wood you spoiled it all. Is it not a fact that General Wood was advocating preparedness and doing all he could to try and have our country get into shape or what all but the wilfully blind could see was sure to come? Is it not a fact that he has always been doing his duty as a soldier instead of staying with the surgeons and doctors as he might have done? In all my life I never believed a man could build himself up by pulling another down, and neither do I believe we can build our friends up in that way.

To Decorate Monument

Editor Boston American:

About twenty-five years ago I went with Henry B. Blackwell and his wife, Lucy Stone, on a woman suffrage lecturing trip to the western part of our State. As we were leaving Boston and passing Bunker Hill monument, Lucy Stone said to me: "In view of the fact that that monument was completed through the efforts of women, I think it very fitting that flags should be hung out from the top of Bunker Hill monument when woman suffrage shall have become an accomplished fact in Massachusetts. And I wish you to see that it is done." I promised her that if alive I would see that her wishes were carried out.
